Wounded Cubans shipped home, diplomats defiant

By LEON DANIEL
United Press International

ST. GEORGE'S, Grenada — The United States said Wednesday hostilities had ended in Grenada and ordered the withdrawal of U.S. troops within the next few days, but Cuban diplomats vowed their expulsion from the Caribbean island could "only be executed by force."

Fifty-seven wounded Cubans — some urgently needing surgery — arrived from Grenada on an International Red Cross charter plane at Jose Marti International Airport, to a welcome from President Fidel Castro, said Havana's official Prensa Latina news agency.

It was the first such repatriation from Grenada since it was invaded Oct. 25 by U.S. troops and forces from six Caribbean nations.

The task force toppled a militant leftist regime, which had seized power in a coup a week earlier.

A State Department spokesman said all hostilities on Grenada had ceased and the United States began withdrawing 11 ships, including a Marine contingent and an aircraft carrier task force.

Defense Secretary Caspar Weinberger later ordered all remaining U.S. forces to begin withdrawing within the next few days. Further details about the withdrawal of the U.S. force, including 6,000 from the Army's 82nd Airborne Division and the 1,800-Marine amphibious task force that also participated in the invasion, were not immediately available.

But Maj. Douglas Frey, Army spokesman on Grenada, said 2,300 soldiers of the 82nd Airborne would leave Thursday and return to Ft. Bragg, N.C., leaving "about 2,500" soldiers of the division on the island.

Only a handfull of Marines remain on Grenada, Frey said. The Rangers were withdrawn late last week. The Pentagon adjusted the casualty figures for the week-long Grenada operation, announcing that 18 Americans were killed and 91 were wounded. Ten of the dead were Army Rangers, who were part of the initial invasion force.

Grenadian Governor General Sir Paul Scoon, the island's interim leader, ordered the Cuban diplomats to leave by late Wednesday. He also demanded that envoys from the Soviet Union and Libya leave the country.

"That order can only be executed by force and by means of troops of the United States," said a statement passed by Cuban diplomats to reporters through the fence around the embassy.

The deadline passed with no immediate reaction from Scoon, who scheduled a news conference for Thursday.

"Our problem is leaving our dead and wounded," said Gail Reed, a member of the Cuban diplomatic staff guarded by U.S. troops in the embassy on a hill overlooking the Grenadian capital of St. George's. Similar guards were posted at the Soviet and Libyan Embassies.

Among documents given to reporters at the Cuban embassy was a statement saying Col. Pedro Tortolo, Cuban commander on Grenada, was safe in the embassy of a "friendly country" — believed to be the Soviet Union.

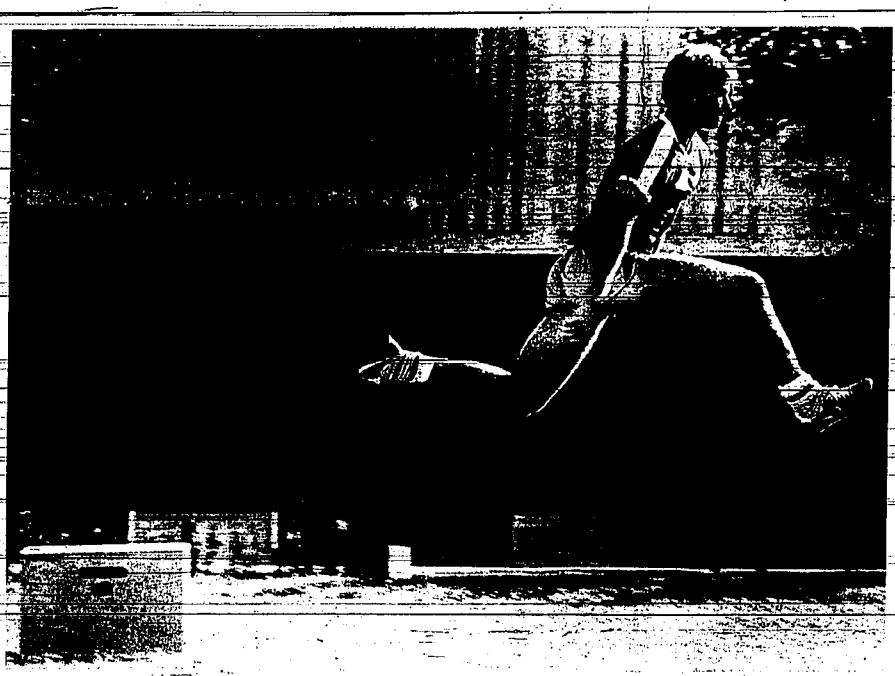

Miss Reed said 37 Cubans and two Grenadians were inside the Cuban Embassy.

In Washington, State Department spokesman John Hughes said hostilities had ceased in Grenada, allowing the repatriation of some 600 Cuban prisoners. But, he added, arrangements for the transfer were not yet made.

Beirut

Fighting shakes Geneva talks

By SCOTT MacLEOD
United Press International

Peace talks — A8

Lebanese troops and Moslem gunmen engulfed Beirut's southern suburb and surrounding hills with artillery, mortar and machine-gun fire Wednesday in a serious breach of a cease-fire. The fighting threatened to unravel peace talks in Geneva.

Army sources reported Druze Moslem shelled the Defense Ministry in Yarze and the Shouf mountain village of Souk el Gharb, the key army base 8 miles from Beirut that guards the southeast approaches to the capital.

State-run Beirut radio said the nine leaders of Lebanon's warring factions learned of the fighting and began calling from Geneva to their Christian and Moslem field commanders to try to silence the guns.

U.S. administration officials said President Reagan would appoint former Defense Secretary Donald Rumsfeld as his special Middle East envoy on Thursday.

White House sources said Rumsfeld, 51, agreed Wednesday to take on the delicate diplomatic mission, succeeding Robert McFarlane, who was recently named the president's national security affairs adviser.

Rumsfeld, chief executive of G.D. Searle & Co., a Skokie, Ill. drug company, is a former Republican congressman from Illinois who served as head of the Office of Economic Opportunity in the Nixon administration before becoming White House chief of staff and, later, defense secretary under President Gerald Ford.

Unconfirmed reports on the right-wing Phalange militia radio reported battles and sniping on the Galerie Semaan, Beirut's main east-west roadway, and in the Tayoune area that separates Christian east from Moslem west Beirut.

The radio, known as the Voice of Lebanon, also said snipers fired on motorists in Kharoub, 15 miles south of Beirut, wounding several people.

House wants Marines to stay

By PATRICIA KOZA
United Press International

WASHINGTON — The House, heeding warnings that it could sabotage the last chance for peace in Lebanon, overwhelmingly rejected a proposal Wednesday to pull U.S. troops out of Beirut by March 1, 1984.

Wrapping up work on a $247 billion military spending bill, congressmen defeated 274-153 an amendment that would have prohibited the use of funds for the Marine peace-keeping force after March 1.

The House then passed the military bill, 328-97, and sent it to the Senate.

"The withdrawal of Marines in March of next year does not mean that the United States is abandoning Lebanon," said Rep. Clarence Long, D-Md., who sponsored the amendment with Reps. Samuel Stratton, D-N.Y., and David Obey, D-Wis. "It only means that one means to that end has not worked."

A total of 126 Democrats — many of them among the House's strongest critics of President Reagan's defense policy — joined 148 Republicans in voting against the amendment.

"I believe in Grenada we ought to pull out ... but I believe in Lebanon, we ought to stay and give peace a chance," said Rep. Edward Markey, D-Mass., a liberal who lead the fight for House passage of a nuclear freeze amendment earlier this year.

"I'd like to send a message to the president, but not at the expense of sending a message to Geneva," echoed Rep. Sander Levin, D-Mich.

Others argued that withdrawal of the Marines would send the worst possible signal to the terrorist responsible for the Oct. 23 bombing, effectively turn control of Lebanon over to Syria and foment another Middle East war.

"To do so after the ghastly terrorist attack on the Marines simply hands the victory to the terrorists," said Rep. Lee Hamilton, D-Ind. "To signal our withdrawal now simply signifies the abandonment of Lebanon."

Long earlier attempted to offer a less restrictive amendment that would have imposed conditions on the withdrawal but that was ruled out of order.

The amendment was debated as the House wrapped up work on a military spending bill that includes money for producing the first MX missiles.

Elsewhere on Capitol Hill, Marine Commandant Paul Kelley said Americans would become the target of "kook terrorists" worldwide if the U.S. military presence in Lebanon is withdrawn.

Rocks threaten Mackay dam spillway

By HAL BERNTON
Times-News writer

BOISE — State engineers say the Mackay Dam is safe, but they also say its spillway is threatened by a mass of fractured rock poised on a nearby bluff.

The rocks could slide into the spillway and block its main channel, says Norm Young, the administrator of the state Department of Water Resources.

Young says the blockage would pose no short-term danger, but it would hamper efforts to control the reservoir during next spring's run-off.

The rocks were loosened by last Friday's earthquake and subsequent aftershocks, Young said Wednesday.

Young says the spillway, located beside the dam, is used to channel water that is released from the dam during periods of high water. Currently, the dam is only 70 percent full.

A crew of engineers and geologists will inspect the rock mass today to determine if it is unstable and should be removed, Young says.

"The safety concern is to get the rocks cleared off, or do a sufficient inspection to satisfy us that they are not causing an immediate problem."

Young says the dam, which is owned by the Big Lost River Irrigation District, was not damaged by the earthquake or any aftershocks.

"Typically, if a dam is a rock-earth structure, it is able to settle and shift, and do a good job of taking an earthquake," Young says. "The fill is stable, and the chances of any sudden releases of water are negligible."

The dam is leaking some, but Young says it "has leaked from the day it was built."

There has been no noticeable increase in the amount of leakage since the earthquake, he says.

Young reports that a new upstream lake — formed by a series of springs that the earthquake opened up on Chilly Butte — has increased the flow of water into the reservoir. But the additional inflow has been compensated for by increasing the dam's outflow.

Mackay Dam is located some four miles north of Mackay. After the Friday earthquake, an evacuation plan was prepared in case the structure gives away.

Nancy Reagan kicks off anti-drug war

By PATRICIA McCORMACK
UPI Health Editor

Nancy Reagan, talking heart-to-heart to parents, joined in a new attack on teenage drug abuse Wednesday in a nationwide campaign combining the persuasion of television and community power of more than 10,000 town meetings.

"This problem is far greater than we had reason to believe a few years ago," the first lady said in "The Chemical People," a recorded appeal aimed at enlisting parents in a crusade to turn the tide against the teenage narcotics and alcohol epidemics.

The program was broadcast simultaneously by public television stations throughout the nation.

"I know that few things in my life have frightened me as much as this drug epidemic," said Mrs. Reagan, host of the program funded by the Richard King Mellon Foundation and Metropolitan Life Foundation.

"I'm scared to death for our children. Drug abuse doesn't solve problems; it makes problems. We cannot afford to lose a generation of our young people to chemicals.

"I'm not an authority on drugs, but I do care about young people, and I don't think we can afford to lose a

Workers remove dirt at dump

GRAND VIEW (UPI) -- Workers removed a three-foot dirt covering Wednesday from an Idaho hazardous waste-disposal trench in the first phase of an investigation into allegations that liquid chemicals have been buried illegally, authorities said.

Environmental Protection Agency officials said they supervised the unearthing of about two dozen barrels by crews assigned to the project by Envirosafe Services of Idaho Inc., owner of the Grand View toxic waste dump.

Federal regulations say waste chemicals can be buried only after they are solidified.

Men indicted in controversy

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A Michigan man and his stepson were indicted Wednesday for civil rights violations in connection with the fatal beating of Vincent Chin, a Chinese-American, who was attacked with a baseball bat.

A federal grand jury returned the two-count indictment in U.S. District Court in Detroit against Ronald Ebens, 44, and Michael Nitz, 25, both of East Detroit, Mich., in connection with the highly publicized death of Chin.

One count charged the defendants conspired to injure and intimidate Chin in exercising his federally protected right to patronize a public place. The other count charged them with interfering with Chin's right to patronize a public place because of his race and national origin, resulting in his death.

Ebens and Nitz earlier were convicted of second-degree murder and given probationary sentences by Wayne County (Mich.) Circuit Judge Charles Kaufman. The sentences prompted outrage in the Asian-American community in Detroit and across the country, and prosecutors then decided to seek the federal charges.

Chin died of head injuries and a fractured skull on June 23, 1982, four days after he was attacked in a parking lot in Highland Park, Mich.

Youths taken from 'Hotel Hell'

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Dozens of runaway youths, many forced into drug dealing and prostitution by pimps and thugs, were rescued by counselors Wednesday from a crumbling Hollywood lodging they call "Hotel Hell."

Lois Lee, who runs a non-profit organization called Children of the Night, said the boys and girls who fled the condemned building — once a fashionable Hollywood Boulevard establishment called the Garden Court Hotel — came from around the country including Chicago, Detroit, Florida.

Two were residents of West Germany who said they had lost their passports.

The youths ranged in age from 12 to 21, and three of the girls who took up the offer of shelter were pregnant, Miss Lee said.

About 50 children were staying in the garbage-strewn structure, using drugs, setting fires and existing without food supplies.

Anderson joins Flynt on tapes

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Sex magazine publisher Larry Flynt said Wednesday he will appear before a federal grand jury apparently investigating the leak of government tapes in the John De Lorean case, but will not answer questions.

Flynt, who was arrested Tuesday after defying a judge's subpoena to produce a tape in which De Lorean is purportedly threatened, said he would voluntarily go before the grand jury on Thursday.

But, he said, "I'm taking the Fifth" if asked about the De Lorean tapes.

Meanwhile, columnist Jack Anderson, who said he has a copy of the same tape in which De Lorean is allegedly threatened if he backs out of a $24 million cocaine deal, said he would defy a subpoena to appear before the panel.

"I've always been willing to cooperate with the authorities, but I don't recognize the right of the authorities to subpoena a newspaperman's files," Anderson said in a telephone interview from Washington.

"If they call me and ask me, I might cooperate with them. If they subpoena me, I will resist it."

Asbestos crisis standards set

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The Labor Department took emergency action Wednesday to toughen federal restrictions on exposure of workers to cancer-causing asbestos at job sites.

The emergency temporary standard, which affects an estimated 375,000 workers in the manufacturing, construction and maritime industries, will remain in effect for six months while a permanent standard is developed.

It lowers the permissible worker exposure level from the current two fibers of asbestos per cubic centimeter of air to 0.5 fibers per cubic centimeter.

There were protests that the new standard is still too high.

Court releases tax protester

SODA SPRINGS (UPI) — Tax protester Clifford Turner has been released from jail after promising to file a proper Idaho income tax return, but he says his 40-day incarceration has not changed his desire to fight the "police state."

The Soda Springs man had been incarcerated in the Power and Caribou county jails until he was set free Tuesday. He finally agreed to comply with Sixth District Judge William Woodland's Sept. 22 order to file a valid return as demanded by the state Tax Commission.

Six other eastern Idaho protesters were jailed with Turner, but they acceded to Woodland's orders after 14 days of imprisonment. They waged a six-day hunger strike during their jail stay.

Turner said Wednesday a blood-pressure ailment was one reason he quit his holdout.

Military won't ship shrimp

NEW IBERIA, La. (UPI) — A former Marine whose plan to send shrimp dinners to American soldiers in Lebanon and Grenada was rejected by the military, says he will welcome the servicemen home with a party "they'll never forget."

"Nothing has changed, not a cotton-picking thing," Dan Allain said Wednesday. "If we can't do it while they're there, then, by God, when they get back we'll give them a party they'll never forget."

The real estate developer came up with the plan to send the shrimp while reading a list of casualties from the recent bombing of Marine headquarters in Beirut. But military officials refused to transport the crustaceans.

"What we're faced with is whether or not the shrimp would arrive there in good condition," said Cornel Martin, an aide to Rep. Billy Tauzin, D-La. "Then there's the problem of getting it to the airport in Beirut, and then storing it there or cooking it immediately."

Allain, working through Tauzin's office, agreed instead to save the 5,000 to 10,000 pounds of shrimp he hopes to buy until the Marines now in Lebanon return to Camp Lejeune, N.C., later this month.

echoed over the U.S. Marine peace-keeping base sandwiched between the combat zones, but a Marine spokesman said no Americans were involved.

"You can hear the fighting, but right now the Marines are not being fired on," said Capt. Wayne Jones 15 minutes after he toured Marine positions adjacent to south Beirut Shiite sectors involved in the clashes.

Clashes spilling over to the Marine compound have killed six Marines and wounded 54 in the last three months.

The Marines have been on a heightened state of alert since a truck bomb Oct. 23 destroyed their headquarters and killed at least 230 servicemen.

Beirut radio said the clashes began in Stair, a Shiite slum a mile from the U.S. peace-keeping base, between the army and gunmen presumably from the Shiite Amal militia.

Rocket explosions boomed as far north as the U.S. Embassy offices in west Beirut.

Army sources reported that Druze Moslem gunners in the Shouf mountain town of Aley pounded the Lebanese Defense Ministry, where U.S. military advisers are based, and at least four shells dug huge craters in the compound.

Heavy shelling of the ministry before a cease-fire Sept. 23 ended three weeks of fierce battles that provoked retaliation by the United States, which trained the guns of the 6th Fleet warships on Druze positions.

The army was also under sporadic attack during the afternoon in the pivotal Shouf mountain village of Souk el Gharb, 8 miles southeast of Beirut, and the nearby army stronghold of Kfar Matta.

The army returned heavy artillery fire, army sources said.

Drugs

generation of our young people to chemicals."

Thousands of town meetings were organized coast to coast to view "The Chemical People" and to consider the problem of burgeoning drug and alcohol abuse.

The project was directed by Lloyd Kaiser, general manager of PBS station WQED in Pittsburgh, which produced the program.

The producers said states reported town meetings in the hundreds: New York, 832; Massachusetts, 243; Ohio, 540; Pennsylvania, 470; Virginia, 116; Florida, 254; Georgia, 200; Oklahoma, 500; Texas, 876; Missouri, 468.

Guest hosts of the show included TV stars Bill Bixby, Michael Landon, Rita Moreno and Bruce Weitz, and former Pittsburgh Pirate Willie Stargell.

Bixby said an estimated three million problem drinkers are under 18 and six percent of high school seniors are drunk daily.

The program in documentary form featured parents and youngsters talking aoout their own denial of a drug problem and how they broke through. Dramatic sequences illustrated the kinds of denial prevalent in communities throughout the nation — "not here, not our kids, no way."

"It's time for us to stop denying the extent of drug and alcohol abuse and bring it out of the court into the open," Mrs. Reagan said.

"Tonight, with the Chemical People, we're beginning a national citizen's effort to organize the fight against drug abuse, to bring togehher the various groups and people involved in the problem.

"We're doing this in the best American tradition, coming together in town meetings, all across the country."

At the end of the program, Mrs. Reagan directed her remarks to people at the town town meetings, saying:

"In a few moments, you'll begin discussing the problem in your area, and the action that your community can take to solve it.

"If you're not at a town meeting now, I urge you to find one or start one in your commmunity, " she said, inviting them to tune in to a second program in the campaign on Nov. 9.

Fair to partly cloudy over Utah today and tonight. Variable clouds with widely scattered showers on Friday. Highs in the 60s; lows near 35.

Synopsis:

Improving weather today -- but it won't last long.

In the wake of a weak storm system, which brought mostly cloudy skies and some showers to much of Idaho on Wednesday, high pressure will move in today. That will produce some clearing in most sections of the state, although showers will persist in the north.

By Friday, however, a stronger frontal system off the Pacific will spread more showers and cooler temperatures over the entire state.

Rainfall amounts on Wednesday were light, ranging from a trace to a few hundredths of an inch. Isolated thundershowers developed in the southeast in the early afternoon, principally in the Idaho Falls vicinity.

Temperatures were mild, with highs in the upper 50s in most valleys and in the 40s in the mountains. The state's warmest reading was 64 degrees at Grangeville, after a morning low of 28 at Dixie.

Winds were generally below 10 mph.

The extended forecast for the Magic Valley and southern Idaho calls for Saturday through Monday to be cloudy with periods of showers. Highs will be in the upper 40s and 50s; lows will be from 35 to 45.

Elsewhere in the nation on Wednesday, the warmest temperature reported was 98 degrees at McAllen, Texas, and the coolest was 23 at Concord, N.H.

Civil rights anthem voiced after Reagan signs King bill

By IRA R. ALLEN
United Press International

WASHINGTON — President Reagan signed a law Wednesday creating a national holiday to honor Martin Luther King Jr., and — quoting King's "I have a dream" speech — said the slain civil rights leader "changed America forever."

With about 200 civil rights leaders gathered under bright sunshine in the Rose Garden, Reagan handed Coretta Scott King the pen with which he designated the third Monday in January a national holiday in memory of her husband. Afterward, guests sang "We Shall Overcome."

Reagan had initially opposed the legislation, approved by the House and Senate by overwhelming margins to create a 10th federal holiday. But he told the White House gathering King in his "39 short years changed America forever."

"In America in the 50's and 60's, one of the important crises we faced was racial discrimination. The man whose words and deeds who stirred the nation to the very depths of our soul was Dr. Martin Luther King Jr.," Reagan said.

"Often he was beaten and imprisoned, but he never stopped teaching non-violence."

Quoting King's 1963 dramatic speech on the steps of the Lincoln Memorial, Reagan said, "I have a dream that one day on the red hills of Georgia, the sons of slaves and the sons of slaveowners will be able to sit down together at the table of brotherhood."

"American history grows from two centuries to 20," Reagan said, "his words that day will never be forgotten."

Said Mrs. King: "All right-thinking people, all right-thinking Americans are joined in spirit with us this day."

"America is a more democratic nation, a more just nation, a more peaceful nation because Martin Luther King Jr. became her preeminent non-violent commander," she said.

After the bill signing, guests began signing "We Shall Overcome," the civil rights anthem, and the soft hymnal chorus swelled row after row until the entire audience was on its feet signing.

Reagan and Vice President George Bush shook hands with the guests but did not join in the singing.

There was no mention by either Reagan or Mrs. King of the controversy the bill engendered before final congressional approval by the Senate two weeks ago.

Strike idles Greyhound bus lines

By HARRIETT HINDMAN
United Press International

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Faced with a strike deadline, Greyhound Lines decided to shut down its nationwide bus service at midnight Wednesday and asked union workers to reconsider its final offer of a 9.5 percent pay cut.

Workers at the nation's largest transportation company, including 7,500 bus drivers, had earlier called a strike for midnight after union officials rejected the offer — which they asserted actually proposed a 20 to 25 percent cut in pay and benefits.

After midnight, drivers planned to drive to the next division point or main terminal. E.B. Franklin, international vice president of the Amalgamated Transit Union said they would stop where passengers "can get other transportation out — somewhere where there is a railroad, airlines or bus lines where they can get out."

Greyhound spokeswoman Kathy Davidson said buses would continue to the nearest "Greyhound-owned" terminal where supervisory personnel would help passengers arrange other transportation.

John W. Teets, chairman and chief executive officer of the parent Greyhound Corp., said the company would shut down at midnight (MST) and buses would stay off the roads until the company's 12,000 union-covered employees have a chance to review the company proposal.

Teets also outlined the company's final offer, which he said consisted of a 9.5 percent wage cut and requiring employees to pay 5 percent into their pension plan for the first time.

"They only tell half the truth," Franklin countered, saying "When you look through the offer there are 20 issues and they all take away. It's closer to 20 to 25 percent (in cuts) when you evaluate all 20 issues."

Franklin added the union was sending members letters outlining the union position.

Greyhound mailed letters and copies of the contract to all employees, urging them to pressure leaders of the Amalgamated Council of Greyhound Local Unions to submit the proposal to a vote of the membership.

Teets and Frank Nageotte, chairman of Greyhound Lines, declined to say how long the company would give employees to respond, but said they would have "sufficient time" before Greyhound began hiring replacements. They indicated that would be a matter of days.

The Honduran defense minister Wednesday denied countries of the U.S.-supported Central American defense alliance would invade Nicaragua, joining Guatemala in his rejection of the the Nicaraguan accusation.

The denials followed a secret meeting in Honduras last week of the Central American Defense Council, known as CONDECA, which was revived Oct. 1 by Guatemala, Honduras and El Salvador, with the United States attending as an observer.

On Monday, Guatemalan chief of state Gen. Oscar Humberto Mejia, also rejected the Nicaraguan charge that CONDECA would serve as one wave of a U.S.-planned three-stage invasion to oust Managua's Marxist regime.

Mejia confirmed the secret Honduran meeting but described it as "technical."

Honduran Defense Minister Col. Amilcar Castillo Suazo said CONDECA was revived "to form a barrier ... to neutralize, to repel any threat from the Communist bloc."

But he insisted, "Our armed forces and people are not preparing to invade any country."

Postage increases aren't merited now

There will certainly be heaps of testimony and lots of pro-and-con debate on both sides, but from where we stand, we think the U.S. Postal Service should think long and hard about coming to the public for yet another increase in postage rates.

The proposed increase is for 3 cents for a first-class letter and corresponding increases in other classes. The jump for first-class letters would be 15 percent, from 20 to 23 cents.

Postmaster General William Bolger says the revenues are needed to cover a projected $800 million deficit for next year, despite two years of operating in the "black."

We haven't been given the explanation yet as to where the money would go by category, but we'd make a guess the bulk of it is in salaries.

Just this weeek, for example, the post office in Twin Falls announced a new exam for postal clerks, who start at more than $10 an hour. Put your calculator to that, and it figures out to about $20,000 a year, not including benefits, vacations, holidays, exemption from Social Security and the other little goodies that go with federal employment.

And that's just for an entry-level position. No wonder the service needs revenue!

Now, we're not entirely in the knock-the-public-servants group of citizens, but we'd bet the increase would have several effects:

- It would make a lot of average citizens just that much angrier and frustrated with all government employees and with Postal Service employees in particular, with whom most of us have at least occasional contact. We'll expect better service, but will we get it? Don't bet on that.
- It would spur the continued growth of competing delivery systems that have sprung up in recent years and are doing a great job of delivering mail and packages all over America, many at a profit. They're doing so by the time-tested methods of efficiency and cost-cutting. The Postal Service isn't exactly known for either.

Yes, the cost of all goods and services continues to rise, but we think this is one proposed increase that would be better left in the idea stage for now. Let the Postal Service try efficiency and salary stability instead.

Property price tag out of line

How stupid does the school administration in Jerome think we, the property owners of the county, are? The $9,000 per acre price tag for the property in question is entirely out of line. Furthermore, the other properties that they are comparing it to, and telling everyone about may be listed at $10,000 per acre, but I will add that they have not sold, and I don't believe the Forsyths' will get anywhere near $9,000 per acre for their property if they should sell it to someone else after the bond election fails.

It looks to me as though they are attempting to make a "royal rip-off" of property owners in Jerome County.

What is wrong with building an elementary school on the property where they tore down the old Lincoln School? This is plenty large enough for a new school, and there is an entire unused football field across the street (that has been closed off) that would make ample playground facilities for the junior high school, Central Elementary and a new school. What is wrong with living within your means?

I'm sorry, but with a school district that wastes money like Jerome does, I will vote no on anything for the district that will raise my taxes . . . Consider this for example . . . the district is paying nearly $10,000 a year to lease mobile homes (the price is for each one) as auxiliary classrooms. These are mobile homes that are stripped down. They are one large room, with a heater in them. They have been doing this for over three years, paying $10,000 each per year on them. Now I'm sure that a stripped down shell mobile home can be outright purchased for a great deal less than this lease they are doing.

I urge anyone who is sick and tired of their taxes being raised for officials to squander in bad deals, to vote no on the bond election in Jerome on Nov. 8.

They are Marines, not soldiers

Twice in the past week headlines in your newspaper have referred to members of the United States Marine Corps in Lebanon as "soldiers." These men may practice the profession of "soldiery." They might be described as "soldierly" or their activities may be referred to as "soldiering." They are not, however, "soldiers."

The United States Army is made up of "soldiers." The Navy consists of a fine group of "sailors." The Air Force has a backbone of "airmen." The United States Marine Corps, according to the President, the Congress, the Department of Defense and even the Associated Press Style Book, is made up of Marines. If you doubt this fact, ask one.

Today, in what is an apparent effort to balance the books, you attributed the capture of a key prisoner to the United States Marines. The text of the article indicates that the man was captured by the 82nd Airborne Division. Although the Commandant of the Marine Corps would be proud to include this Army unit in the Corps, they belong to the United States Army.

At a time when the press is so concerned about their own freedoms, it seems prudent to examine their own knowledge and accuracy.

A bargain: You cease to refer to Marines as "soldiers" and "soldiers" as Marines, and I will relinquish the right to refer to newsmen as novelists.

Geologist described earthquake

I was born in Mackay in January, 1908, the boom days of the mining, and naturally the mining was in my blood.

Fifty-two years ago, I had the privilege of knowing and working with the greatest mining geologist of all times. I need not mention any name at this time, but I will try and explain his finding.

He mentioned that he may never live to see it, nor I may not, but I have. Just as he explained 52 years ago, there was a major earthquake in the Lost River, Challis area and the following effects could make great changes in all of Lost River.

Now this matters not, if my information is of any concern, but I can go over the valley floor and the east-side mountains and prove that his geology was right.

I haven't been there since the quake took place. I don't need to. I know what took place, and as I read and hear reports, it is all as if I was with him today.

It matters not, it can happen many times in future but we have no control of such.

Upside down or not a mystery

IDAHO QUAKE
I was jerked from the bed that morning
And peered through the bedroom door
And seen our crystal chandelier
A hanging from the floor.

So I went up to the basement and found
The fire was kinda slow
And I watched the smoke a curling down-ward
And out the chimney far below.

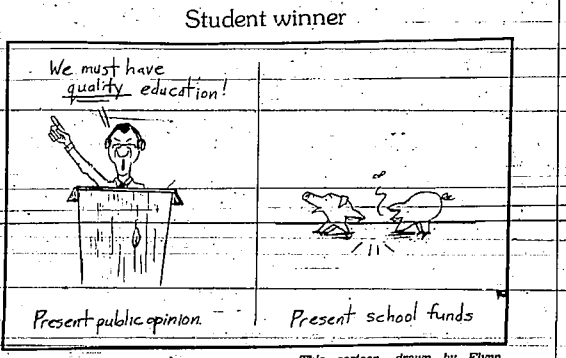

Then I went down to the attic
To see what I could see
And realized that I was standing
Where the basement use to be.

And then I went out on the lawn
to sniff the autumn breeze
And watch the birds hang up-side down
From the roots of our maple trees.

And now the creeks run down the canyons
Just like they use to be
But whether there up-side down or not
Is a mystery to me.

Rights panel deserves decent burial

George Will

WASHINGTON -- The Civil Rights Commission is technically dead, but President Reagan and Congress agree at least in wanting to resurrect it. Alas.

On Sept. 30, the commission's authority to exist expired, and it entered a 60-day statutory winding-down period. Re-authorization has been a casualty of the unresolved controversy about Reagan's attempt to replace three of the six commissioners. His right to replace them is unambiguous. The objection to his nominees, who have been civil rights activists for decades, is that they reject the apostasy of today's civil rights entrepreneurs.

Reagan's nominees believe the law should be color-blind; they believe rights inhere in individuals, not groups; so they oppose government sorting citizens on the basis of pigmentation and chromosomes and allocating group entitlements. Their sin is fidelity to the values the civil rights movement had when the movement really was focused on civil rights. Reagan's nominees enrage their critics because the nominees underscore the fact that today's "civil rights movement" is just another partisan faction.

The commission was created 26 years ago, when there was clarity about what counts as a civil rights issue: A "civil" right is a right that is central to life as a citizen. "Civil" rights include the right to vote and be free from discrimination in employment, public accommodations and housing. Today's "civil rights movement" is an assembly of groups with similar agendas for distributive justice -- basically the enlargement of the welfare state. They have a political stake in using the label "civil rights" to suppress criticism and give their demands special respectability.

But as the distinction between civil rights and economic entitlements has become hazy, the idea of civil rights has lost its luster. As Prof. Chester Finn of Vanderbilt says, a civil right is violated when someone is denied the right to rent a hotel room on account of race. But no civil right is violated -- no "equal protection" is denied -- when government does not guarantee to everyone the money to rent a room.

The intellectual muddle that has been made of the term "civil rights" has produced the political tactic of converting arguments about social policy into ad hominem attacks on the "racism" (or "ageism" or whatever) of persons who do not hew to the changing line regarding civil rights.

Many social policies promoted by "civil rights" groups may have merit. But that would be easier to believe if the policies were offered more on their merits and less on the authority of groups claiming authority to designate particular causes "civil rights" causes. This designation is an attempt to elevate economic preferences to the level of constitutional imperatives.

Here is a situation that should bring a blush even to the cheeks of the cheeky people fighting Reagan's nominees. Reagan's critics say he is "politicizing" the commission. Yet the critics are politicizing civil rights, in this sense: They are erasing the distinction between civil rights, which should be above routine partisanship, and social policy, which is the stuff of partisanship.

They are taking a concept -- civil rights -- about which there was a broad and hard-won consensus 15 years ago, emptying it of its traditional meaning, and stuffing it with the politics of the liberal faction. They are making everything, from the level of defense spending to the economic vitality of black farmers, eligible for the attention of the commission, the business of which is . . . Well, that is another problem.

Being a watchdog, the commission does not make policy; it makes complaints. Inevitably, imagine a watchdog agency issuing a report saying that there has been gratifying progress. Being an institutionalized scold, the commission would stand accused of dereliction of duty if it failed to find fault -- indeed, multiplying faults. The Civil Rights Commission is like Matthew Arnold, an accomplished complainer, of whom, when he died, an acquaintance said: "Poor Matt, he's gone to Heaven, no doubt -- but he won't like God."

Denunciation is the accepted evidence of moral gravity in institutions like this. Thus the commission has an interest in doing what it has done: It has underestimated the progress that has been made in the field of civil rights. And it has multiplied the meanings of "civil rights," thereby multiplying the possibilities for complaining.

The moment for a Civil Rights Commission having passed, it should be interred. That would force those who today use the commission by abusing the concept of civil rights to go where they belong: into normal partisan politics.

Moon's bum rap from courts alarms other denominations

James Kilpatrick

WASHINGTON -- In May of last year, a federal jury in New York found the Rev. Sun Myung Moon guilty of filing false income tax returns.

In July, U.S. District Judge Gerald L. Goettel sentenced him to 18 months in prison. On Sept. 13 of this year, the U.S. Court of Appeals for the 2nd Circuit, by a 2-1 vote, affirmed the conviction.

I have read a transcript of oral argument before the 2nd Circuit, and I have read most of the briefs in the case, including a brief filed by half a dozen religious organizations in Moon's behalf. Viewed simply as a matter of criminal law, the record does not establish Moon's guilt beyond a reasonable doubt. Viewed as a matter of constitutional law, the record raises most serious issues under the First Amendment.

Let me quote from the brief filed by various Presbyterian, Baptist, Episcopal, Unitarian and Catholic associations, led by the National Council of Churches: "(We) stress that (our) filing of this brief is motivated not by any particular sympathy for Reverend Moon, nor by any agreement with his faith." I share the disclaimer. "(We) are motivated, nevertheless, by deep alarm at the means by which defendant Moon's conviction was secured, and by the consequences for religious liberty should the conviction be allowed to stand."

The Rev. Moon, as most readers doubtless know, is head of the Unification Church. To his 3 million followers in more than a hundred nations, Moon is more than merely "head" of the church. He is in effect its living messiah, the very embodiment of this religious movement. Though Moon is advised by a council of elders, final decisions on both secular and sectarian matters are his alone.

The government's principal charge against Moon had to do with bank accounts maintained in his name at Chase Manhattan in New York. Over a period of three years (1973-75), the accounts earned more than $100,000 in interest. The government contends that this interest was personal income to Moon, on which he should have paid income taxes. The defense contends that Moon held these assets merely as trustee for the Unification Church.

There was indeed some evidence that Moon regarded the Chase accounts as peculiarly subject to his own discretion. During the three years, the church maintained other bank accounts that plainly were for church purposes only. But the defense established that Moon did in fact pay personal income taxes on money drawn from the Chase accounts for personal purposes. For my own part, while the issue is not free from doubt, the arrangement sounds to me remarkably like similar fiscal arrangements in other churches in which the minister, bishop or cardinal serves as trustee.

The dispute over the sufficiency of evidence is the least troublesome aspect of this case. Moon is a highly controversial figure. So much has been written about the Moonies' "brainwashing" and "kidnapping" of gullible young people that even though no such charges ever have been established in court, Moon is widely hated and his movement is widely feared. For these reasons, Moon asked to be tried not by a jury that might be prejudiced but rather by a judge who presumably would be impartial.

The government resisted Moon's motion for one reason above all others: It was to punish Moon for making a speech and for buying full-page ads to denounce the government's motives in selectively prosecuting him. The right to a trial by jury is the right of an accused; he can waive that right if he wishes. It is almost unheard of for the government to insist that a jury be impaneled against a defendant's motion. In the Moon case, the government acted from pure vindictiveness. Justice should not be administered in this fashion.

At the heart of the case is an establishment of religion, coupled with the right of Moon's followers freely to exercise their religion by entrusting large sums of money to their supposed messiah.

Moon's lawyers, led by Professor Laurence H. Tribe of Harvard, do not suggest that ministers are exempt from the tax laws that apply to everyone else. Their contention is that religious beliefs must be taken into account in both civil and criminal contexts, and that by studiously excluding religion from the case, Moon was denied a fair trial.

It is not necessary to like this Korean guru to say, as I must, that he got a bum rap. It is small wonder that other churches are alarmed.

James Kilpatrick writes his column, "A Conservative View," from Washington.

Panel will vote on nomination Friday

William Clark testifies in the Senate

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The most conservative elements in the environmental movement Wednesday criticized William Clark for refusing to renounce the policies of the man he has been chosen to replace — Interior Secretary James Watt.

But Clark's confirmation by the Republican-controlled Senate appeared certain as the Senate Energy Committee completed two days of confirmation hearings on Clark. The committee is tentatively scheduled to vote on the nomination Friday. The full Senate could vote on the matter next week.

Leaders of the National Wildlife Federation and National Audubon Society — among the nation's most politically conservative environmentalists — spoke to the panel after Clark finished testifying and repeatedly expressed fears he will pursue a pro-development agenda.

"We are deeply concerned that Judge Clark will merely continue to reflect ongoing White House policies with which we strongly disagree," said Audubon President Russell Peterson.

Jay Hair, executive vice president of the Wildlife Federation — the nation's largest environmental group — said he is especially upset by Clark's record on conservation as a California Supreme Court justice.

"We are deeply concerned by the apparent bias against enforcement of conservation laws," said Hair. "Even more troubling to us is the fact that in several of these cases Mr. Clark had to strain common sense and logic to reach his written conclusions."

While not urging the committee to reject Clark, both Peterson and Hair declined to endorse President Reagan's nominee.

Clark earlier wrapped up his appearance at the confirmation hearing by indicating he may reverse one of Watt's policies and ask Congress to appropriate new money for park land expansion.

"In the upcoming budget, there may well be a review leading to the determination, based on need, of additional acquisition," Clark told Sen. John Chafee, R-R.I.

Clark said the department budget, to be made public in three months, also may include more funds for wildlife refuges.

Watt had refused to ask for money for new park land and opposed congressional efforts to force him to make such purchases.

House sales increase

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new houses jumped 13.7 percent in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday, the highest surge of the year and an unexpected boom despite high mortgage interest rates and record prices.

The average price of a new house rose $7,500 to a record $98,700 during the month, the department said.

September's annual rate of sales was 632,000 units, the highest level since June and the sixth month out of nine this year to show an improvement.

The increase was exaggerated, however, by the government's seasonal adjustment process that made the figure look better in comparison to September declines in several previous years. Before adjustment, sales were up just 2 percent.

Most analysts predicted a decline, seeing drops in June, July and August as a tapering off of the housing boom.

Despite the month's higher sales there were 392,000 new houses unsold at the end of September, the first time in two years the number has been higher than 300,000.

Woman fights to die

RIVERSIDE, Calif. (UPI) — A cerebral-palsy victim who wants to starve to death in a hospital won a temporary restraining order Wednesday preventing doctors from giving her solid food or discharging her pending a full court hearing.

The American Civil Liberties Union is representing Elizabeth Bouvia, 26, who insisted at a hospital news conference that she wants to die peacefully at the facility rather than continue living in a disabled state that demands 24-hour care.

Hospital regulations do not allow her to decline all nourishment, so she has been living on a liquid protein diet for six weeks. If the court rules that the hospital cannot feed her involuntarily, Mrs. Bouvia said she will stop taking all nourishment.

"Despite my mental abilities, my physical disabilities outweigh them," said Mrs. Bouvia, who holds a bachelor's degree in social work. "I realized that a long time ago, and I realized the next years of my life would be a struggle.

"I've done what I can and I don't think I can go on. It was a decision I made over a long period of time."

Superior Court Judge John Hews ruled that Mrs. Bouvia, whose parents are living but who says she has no home, cannot be transferred from the psychiatric unit of Riverside General Hospital until a Nov. 21 hearing on her petition for a preliminary injunction.

Attorneys representing Mrs. Bouvia said the issue in the case is the woman's right to decide for herself what medical care she will submit to, and to not be given treatment she does not want.

Student cracked computers

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A UCLA science student was arrested Wednesday for using his home computer to break into a multi-national Defense Department computer system, gaining access to some "very sensitive" information.

District Attorney Robert Philibosian told reporters that Ronald Mark Austin, 19, used local telephone connections from his home in suburban Santa Monica to gain access to the system, linking governments, agencies and universities in the United States and Europe.

He said it has not been determined what Austin planned to do with the information, or whether he altered any data.

A Defense Department spokesman in Washington said it had a policy of not commenting on cases of this nature. "We do not comment on any case that would end up in active litigation," Major Bob Shields said.

A spokesman for one of the agencies involved, the Rand Corp. think tank in Santa Monica, said no classified or sensitive information was released through its computers.

Cancer cures cause cancer

BOSTON (UPI) — The case of New York's Terence Cardinal Cooke, who developed leukemia while under treatment for another type of cancer and died last month, is far from uncommon, doctors said Wednesday.

Some of the new drugs being used to treat cancers may also produce cancer, particularly leukemia, according to a report in the New England Journal of Medicine.

Of 2,007 patients studied, 14 developed leukemia during a six-year period, while only one member of a 1,566-member control group developed the disease.

"It's fairly common to see patients on these kinds of treatments develop leukemia a few years down the line," said Dr. John Boice, primary author of the study.

In an accompanying editorial, however, Dr. Paul Calabresi of Brown University cautioned the study was no reason to refuse chemotherapy.

The anti-cancer drugs of concern are called alkylating agents, among the most commonly used types. They attack a cell's genetic material, which controls the cell's normal functioning and reproduction.

"These drugs are designed to kill the cells they attack," said Dr. Mark H. Greene, one of the study's authors. "But some of the cells, rather than being killed, are simply injured" and apparently go on reproducing.

Shuttle launch set later in November

WASHINGTON (UPI) — American and European space agency officials decided Wednesday to try to launch the space shuttle Columbia and its instrument-laden Spacelab cargo Nov. 28 despite a reduced scientific return from its experiments.

Adverse seasonal conditions will affect seven of the 38 scientific instruments aboard the European-built orbiting laboratory during the nine-day space flight. The flight originally was set to start Sept. 30 and has been delayed twice.

The record six-man crew for the mission consists of John Young, Brewster Shaw, Owen Garriott, Robert Parker, Byron Lichtenberg and Ulf Merbold, a West German physicist.

The alternate launch date was Feb. 27, but the National Aeronautics and Space Administration and European Space Agency, which is sponsoring half the mission's experiments, decided the penalties for waiting another four months outweighed the benefits.

NASA administrator James Beggs and ESA director-general Eric Quistgaard in Paris made the launch date decision during a telephone conference.

NASA spokesmen at first said an announcement would not be made until Thursday morning, even though technicians at the Kennedy Space Center were told to prepare the shuttle to be moved Thursday to the rocket assembly building for a late November launch. But NASA wound up making the announcement Wednesday after the European agency made the date public.

A flight in February would have added more than $1 million to ESA's costs and would have threatened to disrupt NASA's 1984 shuttle launch schedule. A flight is scheduled for Jan. 29 and another is set to start April 4.

Machine problem was lethal

DALLAS (UPI) — A $1 million lawsuit has been filed by the family of one of three kidney patients killed by a dialysis machine malfunction, as the manufacturers and operators Wednesday traded charges of culpability for the deaths.

Meanwhile, in New York, FDA officials said a Brooklyn, N.Y., woman died Oct. 17 on a faulty dialysis machine identical to the one that malfunctioned in Dallas, but stressed the machine's failure was not the same in both cases.

The family of Jeroline Thompson, 59, filed a $1 million suit in federal court in Dallas Tuesday charging negligence on the part of the Dallas Kidney Disease Center staff, the center owners and the manufacturer of the dialysis machine.

FDA spokesman Christopher Smith said a woman in her 50s, who was not identified, died of cardiac arrest while hooked up to a dialysis machine at the Brooklyn Kidney Center.

Smith said the woman's cause of death differed from the Dallas cases, where the victims suffered cardiac arrest after the machine sent super-heated fluid into their systems.

In the Brooklyn machine, a faulty relay failed to sense the rise in dialysate solution temperature, he said.

The machine at the Dallas center last Friday sent superheated fluid into the bloodstreams of seven patients, causing cardiac arrest in Mrs. Thompson, Ida DeWitt, 76, and George Smith, 57. Three others were injured, and one was not hurt.

A spokesman for the machine's manufacturer, Extracorporeal Inc., of King of Prussia, Pa., claimed center technicians had tampered with the machine, causing an auxiliary heater to cut in and an alarm to fail.

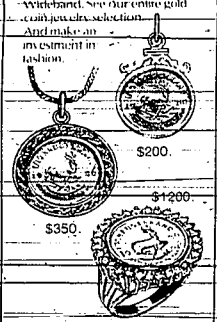

Robert Kniffin, a spokesman for Johnson & Johnson Inc., parent company of Extracorporeal, confirmed earlier findings that the machine was miswired, but he said the wiring defect was not the sole factor in the deaths.

"This miswiring did not cause the dialysis treatment fluid to overheat, which was the apparent cause of death, but may have contributed to preventing the alarm system from functioning," said Kniffin.

APPLY ESTEE LAUDER'S NIGHT REPAIR TONIGHT, AND WAKE UP TO SMOOTHER, SOFTER SKIN.

Night Repair is specially formulated to replace a critical moisture-binding ingredient often destroyed by ultra-violet rays. That's why when you use Night Repair, you'll notice supple, fresh, glowing skin the very next day. With regular use, you'll see more dramatic long-range benefits, too. Even if you're not aware of it, your skin is being exposed to harmful ultra-violet rays every day, whether you seek the sun or not. These rays damage the cells, and cause skin to age prematurely. At night, your skin naturally repairs damaged cells and renews itself by reproducing new, healthier ones. But when you're overexposed to ultra-violet rays, nature simply can't keep up. And that's where Night Repair takes over, actually accelerating the rate at which your cells repair themselves, helping your skin retain its youthful appearance. Estee Lauder's Night Repair. Newsmen decry press ban

By JUDI HASSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — John Chancellor, David Brinkley and the president of CBS News sharply criticized the administration Wednesday for denying access to the news media to cover the U.S. invasion of Grenada.

"In a major and historic moment ... the press was denied access when it was most needed," NBC news commentator Chancellor told a House Judiciary subcommittee hearing on civil liberties.

CBS News President Ed Joyce said the government introduced a new relationship with the press by blocking reporters from the Caribbean island nation for two days — "a relationship virtually unknown in U.S. history."

"I am seriously concerned that we may indeed be witnessing the dawn of a new era of censorship, of manipulation of the press," said Joyce.

Brinkley, an ABC senior correspondent, discounted Pentagon arguments about the safety of journalists and security of the operation.

"The military could and should have taken journalists ashore on Grenada shortly after the initial assault or even the next day," Brinkley said in his prepared remarks. "But so far as we can determine ... there was never any plan for dealing with journalists."

The administration was criticized by journalists last week because it first refused to allow reporters access to Grenada and then strictly limited their visits for the rest of the week.

Two administration officials said the administration initially planned to allow reporters on the island the day after the invasion.

Langhorne Motley, assistant secretary of state for inter-American affairs, told reporters in Charleston, S.C., that invasion planners assumed the island would be secure by the second day and the press could be admitted.

"As it turned out, the only thing that was secure, and even that wasn't that secure the first two days, was the airport, and it was a 4,000-foot runway under construction," he said.

David Gergen, White House communications director, said in an interview in St. Louis the decision to allow reporters on the island the second day was scrapped on the advice of ground commanders. "It is true a lot of reporters have covered wars up close, and a lot have been shot," Gergen said.

The three news executives noted that American journalists accompanied military forces in Vietnam, Korea and World War II without compromising the security of a secret operation. Reporters also signed waivers absolving the military of responsibility for their security.

Rep. Harold Sawyer, R-Mich., pointed out that reporters did not accompany U.S. military forces during the aborted attempt to rescue the American hostages in Iran, and no press witnessed the Israeli rescue of hostages at Entebbe, Uganda.

UN deplores invasion

UNITED NATIONS (UPI) — The General Assembly Wednesday "deeply deplored" the U.S.-led invasion of Grenada and called for the immediate withdrawal of foreign troops from the eastern Caribbean island.

The assembly voted 108 to 9 with 27 abstentions on the resolution which is non-binding on member nations. Opposed were the United States, Antigua, Barbados, Dominica, El Salvador, Israel, Jamaica, St. Lucia and St. Vincent.

A Belgian amendment that sought "free elections as soon as possible so the Grenadian people can democratically elect their own government" was approved 71 votes to 23 with 41 abstentions and a request to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar to assess the situation and report to the assembly in 72 hours was adopted 122-3-14.

Trinidad and Tobago, a Caribbean country not part of the U.S.-led force that invaded Grenada, submitted a separate draft much milder than the one sponsored by Nicaragua but it was not immediately voted upon.

U.S. Ambassador Jeane Kirkpatrick then insisted that delegates also vote on operative paragraphs of the resolution item-by-item.

On the separate decisions delegates voted 106 to 8 with 25 abstentions to "deeply deplore" the armed intervention. A paragraph deploring the death of innocent civilians was adopted by 126 votes to 4 with 8 abstentions.

A call for all states to respect the sovereignty of independent states was approved 142 to 0 with 1 abstention.

The United States, A separate call for the immediate cessation of armed intervention and withdrawal of foreign troops was adopted by 108 votes to 9 with 21 abstentions.

Trinidad's draft differed in that it only "deeply regretted" the invasion and urged the establishment of a broad-based civilian administration prior to "free and fair elections."

It also called for a "security presence" composed of elements from Caribbean and British Commonwealth countries and the dispatch of a fact-finding mission of "eminent nationals" from the Caribbean to report to Secretary-General Javier Perez de Cuellar.

U.S. sends cash to island

WASHINGTON (UPI) — The United States announced a new program for $3 million in economic aid for Grenada Wednesday, some of it to repair damage caused in the recent fighting.

The new allocation of aid money will bring the U.S. economic aid commitment in the current year to $3.475 million, a figure that works out to $31.59 per Grenadian. In previous years there was no U.S. economic aid program for Grenada. The first aid for this year, $475,000, was announced Monday.

Peter McPherson, administrator of the Agency for International Development, told reporters the money is expected to be spent in the next few months and a U.S. survey team now on the island may propose longer term projects, possibly involving the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers on construction projects.

Deputy Secretary of State Kenneth Dam, in testimony to the House Foreign Affairs committee at the same time, revealed that the Soviets, Cubans and North Koreans had signed secret agreements to donate $37.8 million in military equipment to the previous Grenadian government.

'Friendly fire' investigated

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A key congressman asked for an investigation Wednesday into allegations that as many as nine of the 18 U.S. servicemen who died in the invasion of Grenada may have been killed by other American troops.

"There's speculation that some of them were killed by their own gunfire because of the closeness of the fighting," said the chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, Rep. Melvin Price, D-Ill. "There's no accurate information yet that is fact."

But, he said, his committee has asked the Defense Department "to give a full report on what happened. We expect to receive that report very shortly."

The Pentagon acknowledged earlier this week that 12 Americans had been wounded when an A-7 fighter-bomber "invadvertently" released a bomb on a U.S. position.

Lebanon peace negotiations take step toward a solution

By JOHN A. CALLCOTT
United Press International

GENEVA, Switzerland — Lebanon's warring factions Wednesday reached their first concrete agreement in three days of peace talks, declaring the nation an independent state aligned firmly with the Arab world.

The declaration, contained in a formal resolution, was written by the nine leaders in the talks, who represent the U.S.-backed government, the right-wing Christian militia and opposition Shiite, Sunni and Druze Moslems.

A formal text of the resolution was not released, but officials said its overall direction for the first time placed the future course of the nation squarely in the Arab fold.

"It is Arab in identity and a constituent member of the Arab League, bound by its agreements," read an unofficial text released by several of the delegates. "The Lebanese state embodies these principles in all domains without exception."

Conference participants said the declaration called Lebanon an "independent and sovereign Arab country united by its territory, people and institutions."

WALID JUMBLATT
Walks out of session

Since independence in 1943, the identity of Lebanon has been divided between Christians, who have deep financial and political ties to the West and Moslems, who seek spiritual allegiance and political strength with neighboring Arabs.

Exactly how the definition of Lebanon as an Arab state would be put into effect was not explained, which apparently gave the Christian Phalange leaders, Pierre Gemayel, father of president Amin, and former president Camille Chamoun the leeway to support the measure.

Walid Jumblatt, leader of the Druze Moslems and founder of the pro-Syrian National Salvation Front, said he would insist that the resolution lead to dramatic changes in school texts and control of the radio and television.

"It's not bad," Jumblatt said of the resolution. He said, however, it was only "a beginning" and that the principle of making Lebanon an "Arab state must be made concrete in all internal and external aspects."

Despite the agreement, a morning meeting ended in anger with heated exchanges on the crucial issue of the May 17 troop withdrawal accord between the Lebanese government and Israel.

Jumblatt said he brought up the issue and then stormed out of the talks because he was prevented from raising the withdrawal accord for discussion by Gemayel and his father.

Filipinos raise energy prices

MANILA, Philippines (UPI) — The government Wednesday increased petroleum prices 18 percent to prevent gasoline lines and keep up with the devaluation of the peso, but prices of basic goods were expected to soar as a result.

The Philippine Board of Energy said the move was triggered by the peso's 27 percent devaluation since the country plunged into economic and political crisis after widespread protests erupted over the assassination Aug. 21 of opposition leader Benigno S. Aquino Jr.

The Board said the increase was aimed at preventing hoarding and eliminating lines of motorists at gasoline stations reminiscent of those that formed during the 1973 oil crisis.

With the increase, which takes effect Thursday, premium gasoline will cost $1.73 a gallon. A similar 18 percent price markup was imposed on regular gasoline, diesel oil, aviation gas, cooking gas and kerosene.

The rise in petroleum prices was expected to spark demands for hikes in transport and fertilizer costs and also boost prices of food and other essential consumer goods.

But the board said it was trying to keep prices up with the devaluation of the peso made necessary after businessmen worried at the anti-government protests took hundreds of millions of dollars in capital out of the Philippines.

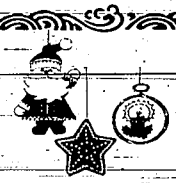

Almost daily protests have rocked the country since the slaying. Businessmen stashed away dollar holdings, expanding the balance of payments deficit this year to a record $2.05 billion.

Pressing demands for the resignation of the 18-year-old government of President Ferdinand Marcos, opposition leaders staged a rally Wednesday at Lubao, 40 miles northwest of Manila.

Former Philippine President Diosdado Macapagal, 73, said Marcos's statement Monday designating the prime minister as his successor indicated Marcos's powerful wife, Imelda, may take over from him.

Cesar Virata, 54, a former business professor well regarded in the international financial community, is currently prime minister.

Mrs. Marcos, 54, is a member of the executive committee.

Deal with Israel is problem

By SCOTT MacLEOD

Analysis

BEIRUT, Lebanon — The Israeli-Lebanese withdrawal accord — an agreement that has yet to be implemented — threatens to doom the talks in Geneva on ending nearly eight years of war between Lebanon's Moslems and Christians.

Israel, which signed the accord with the Christian-led government of Amin Gemayel, warns its 30,000 troops will seal off southern Lebanon if the pact is scrapped.

Syria, which heavily backs the main Lebanese opposition group, the National Salvation Front, insists there will be no peace unless the May 17 agreement is scrapped and its 40,000 troops will remain in eastern Lebanon.

There is, as yet, no public display of moderation.

The United States officially supports the Israeli position, a point Gemayel must take into serious consideration given the all-important help he receives from U.S. Marines and Pentagon military advisers.

When asked what the American reaction would be if the Lebanese factions agreed unanimously to scrap the accord, a western diplomat familiar with U.S. policy replied:

"If Lebanon throws it out, I don't suppose the United States will break off relations with Lebanon, but it would probably try to talk them out of it."

According to Western diplomats, one reason for the U.S. pressure is that President Reagan considers it a key success in his foreign policy, a "peacemaking" symbol.

It was negotiated personally by his secretary of state, George Shultz, in a dramatic show of shuttle diplomacy and Reagan can hold it up at election time as President Carter did with the Camp David accords between Israel and Egypt.

But Lebanon is not Egypt.

Whereas Anwar Sadat freely went to Jerusalem, Gemayel's government said it signed the pact with Israel feeling it was the only way to get the Israeli occupation troops to leave.

While the agreement calls for normalized relations and joint security arrangements between Israel and Lebanon, its key feature for Lebanon was the withdrawal of the Israeli forces which invaded to crush the Palestine Liberation Organization.

Perhaps a bigger problem, for which the Lebanese government now blames the United States, is that Syria was not made a party to the negotiations calling for troop withdrawals.

With 40,000 troops in Lebanon, where they intervened to quell the Lebanese civil war in 1976, Syria was in a position to torpedo peace by simply refusing to pull its troops out.

Rather than being left out, some Lebanese sources say, the Syrians should have been a main party, especially considering the fresh Soviet support for Syria.

President Hafez Assad was humiliated by Israel in the 1982 invasion of Lebanon when virtually his whole air force was shot down and is not likely to rest until he scores some kind of victory through his control of the anti-government groups in Lebanon.

U.S. says it will honor earlier agreement

JERUSALEM (UPI) — U.S. Undersecretary of State Lawrence Eagleburger assured Israeli leaders Tuesday Washington will not sacrifice the Israeli-Lebanese withdrawal accord to prop up the Beirut government against its Moslem critics.

"It is essential. We value it and we stand by it," Eagleburger said of the pact, adding Israel was a strategic asset needed to confront the growing Soviet military buildup in Syria.

Eagleburger's comments were seen as assurances to Israel that the pact — the key Israeli symbol of success from its invasion of Lebanon — would not be abrogated to keep the U.S.-backed Gemayel government in Beirut in power.

Eagleburger met privately with Foreign Ministry officials then with Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir.

"If the second moderate Arab country to sign a major agreement with Israel were overwhelmed by the forces opposed to peace, then what would be the future prospects of the peace process?" Eagleburger said.

Soviets denying charges

KINGSTON, Jamaica (UPI) — The Soviet Embassy Wednesday denied Jamaican accusations that four Russian diplomats plotted murder, calling their expulsion an attempt to worsen relations between the two nations.

A Soviet Embassy spokesman said the four diplomats planned to leave Jamaica Friday, just under the deadline imposed in Tuesday's expulsion order issued by Prime Minister Edward Seaga.

The prime minister told Parliament he was expelling the Soviets and the Jamaica correspondent for the Cuban news agency in connection with an alleged plot to kill a female employee of the Jamaican Foreign Ministry.

Seaga said security officials had learned the five men hatched the alleged murder plot because the unidentified woman had learned that another ministry employee was passing information to the Soviets.

A Soviet spokesman said his embassy "resolutely refutes and rejects allegations against its members" and will "hold (Jamaican) authorities responsible for the consequences that their actions can have on bilateral relations."

"Allegations against members of the embassy staff as to the nature of their activities are definitely not true and could be aimed only at intentional worsening of relations between our two countries," the Soviet spokesman said.

Seaga's accusations of Soviet-Cuban meddling in Jamaica was seen as part of a stiff anti-communist drive afoot in Caribbean democracies supporting the U.S. invasion of Grenada.

Jamaica sent 150 soldiers to assist the U.S. invasion on Oct. 25 following the assassination of Marxist Prime Minister Maurice Bishop, a move President Reagan said was needed to restore "order and democracy."

Strikers close Tahiti hotels

PAPEETE, Tahiti (UPI) — Three of Tahiti's largest hotels closed Wednesday after their owners rejected demands by striking hotel workers and French authorities flew in extra police, fearing new violence in the bitter dispute.

Hundreds of American, Australian and New Zealand tourists on the French-controlled island were forced to repack their bags and change hotels after talks between the hotel owners and the strikers broke down.

The owners of the Tahaara, Maeva and Beachcomber hotels decided to close after rejecting as "inadmissible" demands by representatives of the 300 strikers for higher wages and shorter working hours.

Authorities flew 120 national police, or gendarmes, to Papeete from Noumea, capital of France's other nearby South Pacific territory of New Caledonia.

Observers said the dispatch of the police was a sign of French anxiety over the disorder in the vacation paradise 2,500 miles south of Hawaii.

The dispute turned violent Monday when strikers pillaged four of the island's luxury hotels, throwing furniture and two tourists into swimming pools and later battling police who hurled tear gas to break up the protests.

Strikers continued to picket the entrances of the four large countryside hotels Wednesday, the sixth day of the walkout, making it difficult for tourists to leave their hotel grounds.

South Africa votes on race

JOHANNESBURG, South Africa (UPI) — South African whites voted heavily Wednesday on a proposed new constitution that would give political rights to some non-whites but exclude the nation's overwhelming black majority.

Police stepped up security at polling booths after two bombs rocked downtown Durban in what officials warned might be black militant attempts to disrupt the balloting.

Before the whites-only voting started, liberals predicted that approval of the new constitution would create political chaos, and right-wing proponents of strict racial segregation — apartheid — said it would be the beginning of the end of white supremacy.

The ruling National Party predicted a solid 60 percent vote in favor of the proposed constitution, which gives the vote to Asians and mixed-race "coloreds."

Political experts said the seven-week referendum campaign had overturned traditional voting patterns, noting that public opinion polls showed 30 percent of the white vote undecided.

First returns were expected early Thursday and final results later in the day.

Packs of wolves plague victims of earthquake

By ISMET G. IMSET
United Press International

ERZURUM, Turkey — Troops shot packs of wolves crazed by the stench of the dead Wednesday as rescuers unearthed hundreds more victims from earthquake-flattened villages. A military official predicted the death toll would soon reach 2,000.

Three powerful aftershocks and several minor tremors rolled across the demolished villages in eastern Turkey and felled some of the damaged buildings, particularly schools, that survived Sunday's quake.

The renewed tremors struck terror in survivors as relief teams worked across the region to disinfect water sources and prevent outbreaks of typhoid.

"We want to leave this place as soon as possible," said Resin Erbas, 72, one of 190 residents of the village of Degirmenli. "We are scared."

The official death count was put at 1,330, but recovery teams pulled out at least 400 more bodies Wednesday.

Military officials on the scene said the official count was behind and a ranking army officer in Erzurum said he believed the toll might reach 2,000 by day's end.

At least 33 villages were destroyed and another 44 suffered heavy damage in the Sunday morning quake, which measured 7.1 on the Richter scale, officials said.

Troops also shot packs of wolves that descended on the villages. Officials said the wolves were "driven mad" by the stench of flesh, including human victims and the carcasses of some 30,000 head of livestock killed in the quake.

The Red Crescent, the Moslem equivalent of the Red Cross, said tons of relief supplies, tents and drugs arrived in the area from other provinces and abroad.

Medical teams from the 3rd Turkish army fanned out to protect survivors agaist disease. Crews poured disinfectant liquids into wells and streams.

"The recovery operations will continue through Friday," said Gen. Fikret Oktay, the 3rd Army commander.

Armed troops cordoned off the flattened expanse of what were villages in the northeastern-most region of Anatolia, near the Soviet border, to ward off looters.

Diggers found 79 more bodies in the village of Kizlarkalesi, one of the hardest hit.

CONNERY'S CRAFT

Q. What did Sean Connery do before he became an actor?

A. Polished coffins in a woodshop. His medical discharge from the Royal Navy qualified him for money to learn a trade. That was it. Wood polishing.

Q. How much higher than the national average is the cost of living in Alaska?

A. About 25 percent.

Q. What's the name of that Tennessee town with no name?

A. If you mean Nameless, Tenn., it has that for a name.

COFFEE FIRST

Coffee still ranks No. 1 on that list of America's favorite drinks, with 56 percent of the population buying it. But it seems to be losing some markets. Twenty years ago, 75 percent of the population routinely bought coffee. No. 2 today is any sort of soft drink, with 53 percent. No. 3 milk, with 49 percent.

Bugs found in police station leave trail to chief's office

AVON, Conn. (UPI) — State police found at least four electronic bugging devices in locker rooms and other areas of the Avon Police Department, with wires leading to the chief's office.

A special state police unit discovered the eavesdropping devices Saturday during a check of the police station requested by town officials, authorities confirmed Tuesday.

Hartford State's Attorney John M. Bailey said the devices were located in areas of the building where officers congregate, such as locker rooms and offices.

It was unlikely that civilians conducted confidential conversations in those areas, he said, and officials did not believe there was any "violation of individual civil rights of anyone brought (to the department) on charges."

Officials declined to say if there were any suspects in the case and would not reveal where in the rooms the devices were concealed, how long they might have been there or of what type they were.

"We have no knowledge about who planted the bugs," Bailey said. "It appears to be a violation of the special (state statute) section (dealing with) placing bugs in public areas."

The police department has been wracked by dissension in recent months.

The 15-year tenure of Police Chief Domenic A. Zacchio ended after the controversy culminated in a unanimous no-confidence vote Feb. 9 by the 23-member police union. Two months later, Zacchio resigned.

Avon police Lt. James A. Martino Jr. officially became chief last month.

Town Manager Philip K. Schenck Jr. said he informed Bailey on Monday that state police had found the bugs during a routine security check and pledged full cooperation from Avon officials.

Schenck said that when Martino took over as acting chief last spring, he moved a desk in the chief's office and found a pipe underneath containing wires, including some that appeared to have been disconnected.

Those wires, Schenck said, had been connected to the eavesdropping devices.

Schenck and Martino said it was routine to have security checks conducted at police stations, but Bailey said he was not aware such checks were routine.

Baker claims he's a 'slob,' stunned by award for attire

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Senate Republican leader Howard Baker, describing himself as a "slob," said Wednesday he was stunned at being named the second-best-dressed man in government.

"I have absolutely no taste in clothes," Baker told the Senate. "I am a slob."

Baker was barely beaten out by President Reagan in a poll of best-dressed men in government conducted by the Tailor's Council of America.

The GOP leader said he found out about the honor reading the Washington Post and said he had never "been so surprised so early in the morning."

Baker said his wife, Joy, does not let him leave their home in the morning without a clothing inspection.

He said tailors and haberdashers have threatened to send him a suit if he did not come and choose one.

And during the Watergate hearings, Baker said, he was inundated with offers of clothing.

Baker said some of the glory of the award was tarnished by the naming of John Travolta in the film category and Julius (Dr. J.) Irving among athletes.

He said Travolta is only seen in a T-shirt and Irving is never seen "except in his underwear."

Idahoan's outhouse disappears

COEUR d'ALENE (UPI) — Elmer Osborne returned to his cabin in the woods to find that somebody had stolen his brand new outhouse.

All that was left, he reported to the sheriff's office, was a hole in the ground.

"If somebody was walking around and fell in there, they'd sue me for sure," he added. "I don't know what to think about some people. They'll steal anything they can."

It will cost $100 to replace the outhouse, and Osborne said he will spend the money because he can't get along without it.

GEORGE BURNS
He's all booked up

Burns plans to stay on for 5 years

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — George Burns, the 87-year-old comedian who twice played the Almighty in motion pictures and recently wrote a book "How to Live to Be 100," plans to stay earthbound for at least five more years.

"I can't afford to die, not when I'm booked," the cigar-chomping Burns said Tuesday after announcing he had signed a five-year contract with Caesars World Inc. to perform five weeks per year at Caesars' two Nevada resorts.

Burns first appeared in Las Vegas in 1960 but said, "The first time I played Caesars Palace it was owned by Julius."

Burns, who starred in "Oh, God" and "Oh, God, Book II," is currently filming another sequel, "God, III," being filmed at Caesars Palace Hotel in Las Vegas this week.

"It is easy for me to play God," said Burns. "I don't put on any makeup."

Lions have their owner for dinner

CORVALLIS, Ore. (UPI) — Officers have positively identified a Corvallis area man eaten by his pet lions.

The remains of Merwin Maddux, 40, were identified Tuesday through dental records.

Maddux was discovered Friday by his wife, Kathleen, in a fenced compound where he kept the three adult African lions. The compound is on a farm 20 miles southeast of Corvallis.

Benton County Sheriff Jack Dolan said about 40 pounds of remains, mostly hair and bones, were found. Clothing located in the compound was identified as by his wife as belonging to Maddux, Dolan said.

The lions, which weighed 350 to 475 pounds each, were shot at the request of Mrs. Maddux.

Savitch, pal drank glass of wine each

DOYLESTOWN, Pa. (UPI) — Tests show NBC anchorwoman Jessica Savitch and New York Post executive Martin Fischbein had only a small amount of wine before their car plunged into the Delaware Canal, drowning them both.

A spokeswoman for coroner Thomas Rosko said Wednesday toxicology tests showed Savitch, 36, and Fischbein, 34, each consumed "from a half a glass to a glass of wine" before the Oct. 23 accident.

She said the wine would not have affected Fischbein's driving abilities.

The accident occurred after the two had dinner at the Cher Odette restaurant, in New Hope, where an owner said they had shared a bottle of white wine.

Fischbein was driving out of the parking lot when he apparently mistook the canal towpath for an exit.

The state Department of Environmental Resources, which owns the Delaware Canal, installed a barricade at the accident site last week.

Spokane bank to decide credit group's fate

By BOB FREUND
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Federal Intermediate Credit Bank in Spokane will make the first of three decisions that will save or scuttle the Southern Idaho Production Credit Association next week.

The bank's executive officers will decide what action to take and inform the local association's board of directors at the end of next week, Tom Brown, the credit bank's senior vice president, said Wednesday.

That action will be reviewed by the federal bank's board of directors on Nov. 14 and finally, by Farm Credit Administration officials in Washington, D.C.

The Twin Falls-based production credit association was taken over by federal authorities in September because of large loan losses.

When the Farm Credit Administration stepped in, 68 loans — involving $32.1 million — were being liquidated, the auditors found. Of those, officials figured at least $11.5 million could not be recouped and were carried as losses, Brown said. These loans had used up all the association's reserves for bad debts, as well as all but $400,000 of its surplus funds, the auditors discovered.

The options being considered by federal officials include liquidating the Southern Idaho Production Credit Association, merging it with another solvent association, dividing it up among area production credit associations or pumping more money in to keep it alive.

Many farmer and rancher members of the SIPCA fear that the bank's decision will be the same as those made on three other troubled associations in past months — liquidation.

In Gooding on Monday, those fears sparked an informal alliance aimed at saving the local PCA.

"The message has to be conveyed to the Spokane bank that the farmers down here definitely want to keep it intact, and that we're going to fight to keep it intact," said Dick Graves of Gooding, a former PCA loan officer and one of the organizers.

Although only 38 farmers attended Monday's meeting, co-organizer Lee Barron, a Fairfield-area rancher, says he expects more association members to join as they hear about the effort.

The coalition parallels another group formed by Twin Falls farmer Larry McKay to support the PCA.

Neither group has figured out exactly how it wants to approach the problem. However, a show of solidarity may persuade the Spokane bank's officers to look at ways of retaining the association, the leaders of the coalition said in Gooding on Monday.

But whether the production credit association's own employees and its board of directors will argue to keep it alive remains a big question, they said.

The organizers said the Spokane bank must bear partial blame for putting the PCA in difficulty. It reviewed loans and recommended policies that were rubber-stamped by the PCA, they said.

And Boise attorney John Runft, who has sued the PCA on behalf of a farmers group, says that his investigation, along with court depositions, shows that the local PCA grew in some measure by persuading farmers to take out short-term loans with the PCA on capital items and land, which normally would be financed on a long-term basis. Short-term loans cost farmers more money in interest.

Brown said Wednesday that he did not know about the local PCA's lending practices.

He met with the PCA board of directors on Tuesday in Twin Falls to discuss the situation.

Brown also said Federal Intermediate Credit Bank intends to make sure that the viable loans will be assumed by a strong production credit association no matter what option is selected, and he called liquidation a "last alternative."

Members interested in joining the coalition should call Barron at 764-2509 or Graves at 934-5180. McKay can be reached at 733-4393.

Rick Strickland, the director of the Renaissance Academy, is out of a piano. He will have to return this Mason and Hamlin grand piano to the YFCA.

Renaissance Academy, YFCA fight over piano

By ANNETTE CARY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — The Renaissance Academy will return the YFCA's piano on Friday, following a tug of war between the two institutions.

The subject of the discord, a Mason and Hamlin grand piano that was donated to the YWCA by the Twentieth Century Club about 37 years ago, was loaned to the academy for 11 weeks.

But on Sept. 24, the end of the loan period, no piano showed up back at the Twin Falls YFCA. Three weeks later, and still without the piano, the YFCA board of directors voted to have the piano returned to the Y building.

Board member Stephen Hartgen, who made the motion at a board meeting on Oct. 18, says the board objected to having the piano out of the YFCA's possession after the loan agreement had expired. And the board had no proof of insurance on the piano — which has been assessed as having a replacement value of between $10,000 and $12,000 — while it was at the Twin Falls arts center.

Academy director Richard Strickland says he did not return the piano at the time specified in a written "gentleman's agreement" because YFCA board President James Tarter had "said not to worry about" returning it.

In addition, Strickland says he was reluctant to pay a $50 professional moving charge and a $45 tuning bill, only to have the loan extended. Then, moving the piano back to the academy would cost the financially-struggling institution another $50, he said this week.

In the meantime, Strickland went ahead and committed the academy to a December recital by academy students, a January concert by the Kenard Piano Trio from the University of Idaho, a March concert by the Florestan Piano Trio of Portland and a concert series to begin in January — all using the Y's piano.

However, Tarter says no provisions were made to extend the loan. Instead, he says he told Strickland to work with the general director of the YFCA to extend the loan and offered to "pass the conversation along" to director John Eschenburg.

Eschenburg says he promised the board when he became director almost two years ago that no more of the organization's equipment would "mysteriously disappear." No trace can be found of an organ, an electric pottery kiln that was left as a bequest and a canoe that belonged to the Y before Eschenburg took over.

Bank gives money

In United Way

By PAT MARCANTONIO
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A $20,220 contribution from Twin Falls Bank and Trust has boosted the Magic Valley United Way's annual fund-raising campaign to 68 percent of its goal.

The campaign has generated $125,625 in pledges toward its $185,000 objective, says Walt Sinclair of Twin Falls, the campaign chairman. The figure is ahead of last year at this same time, but below the organization's expectations for this year.

Under new rules, the United Way will allocate funds to its 15 member agencies after the campaign this year. In years past, the allocations were made before the campaign began. If not all of the pledge cards are returned in time, the United Way allocation committee will have to postpone its job until it knows better how much money can be spent, Sinclair says.

The allocations committee will begin interviewing the agencies on Nov. 10 to determine their needs, he says, but it will delay actual allocations for awhile.

Such a delay, however, might cause problems to the agencies, which need to know how much they will receive to plan their budgets for the coming year, Sinclair says.

As for the money already pledged, "we've still got a long way to go, but we're doing well," Sinclair said this year.

United Way also has received a new gift from JB's Big Boy restaurant of Twin Falls. A $1,000 check was presented Tuesday by the restaurant chain's president, Clark D. Jones of Salt Lake City, who was in town for the opening of the restaurant's new building, Sinclair says.

Jones said the business had been in Twin Falls for a long time and it

Hopefuls in city race stress experience in trouble shooting

DOUG VOLLMER

Vollmer views all city activities as 'the people's business'

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

Editor's note: This is the second in a four-part series that profiles the eight candidates for Twin Falls City Council.

TWIN FALLS — Doug Vollmer takes the businessman's eye view of the city.

City government is in "the people business," he says. As in any other form of business, success follows efficiency and "good economics," Vollmer says.

For example, even though the city has a high-quality work force, Vollmer thinks individuals should prove their effectiveness. There are a lot of excellent people out of work, he says.

Likewise, he asks if the city needs all its employees and equipment. The city has 180 employees, half of whom work in the police and fire departments. He asks, "What do they do?"

If the private sector could do any of those things better, they should be given the chance, Vollmer says.

For the past two years, Vollmer has been president of the Twin Falls Chamber of Commerce. He has been credited with turning that organization into an aggressive force in promoting Twin Falls to new industries.

Under his presidency, the chamber hired a new director, Mike Dellon. Vollmer also played an active role in attracting the E.F. Johnson Co., and "lived and breathed" this fall's attempt to lure the Stouffer Food Corp. to Twin Falls, he says.

"I felt it would be time to move on into the City Council, where I could continue those activities," he says.

Vollmer, who lives at 475 Buchanan St., has lived in Twin Falls since 1949. He attended Twin Falls High School and has a certificate from UCLA in real-estate appraising. Vollmer, 41, now runs American Real Estate and Appraisal, a firm he founded in 1971.

Although he has never held political office before, he says his years with the chamber have been a real eye-opener. For the first time, he got a chance to see what was really going on, he says.

CAMPAIGN '83 City elections

Race funds low

TWIN FALLS — Seven days before next Tuesday's Twin Falls City Council election, raising money did not appear to be on the minds of the eight registered candidates.

According to forms filed Tuesday — in accordance with the state's new "sunshine" law for large cities — incumbent Gale Kleinkopf had raised the most money, $375.

Of the other candidates, Doug Vollmer had raised $220, Jack Miller $210, Lauren Craig $51 and Ernest Vasquez $31.

Of Kleinkopf's funds, $100 came out of his own pocket and $125 from a political committee.

Most expenditures reported by the candidates were for direct-mailing, newspaper advertising and printing.

Erik Andersen, Calvin Beutler and incumbent Alan Wubker had raised no money, nor spent any, as of Tuesday.

The reporting period does not include the seven days prior to the election, during which one candidate has predicted that a much greater amount would be raised and spent.

The candidates must file another report 30 days after the election.

Craig says council members must keep their minds open

By DAVID MOFFAT
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — Lauren Craig thinks an open mind may be the best quality a city councilman can have.

Now that his children have grown and left home, and his life has a new flexibility, he would like to use his on the Twin Falls City Council.

"I don't think a door should be slammed in anyone's face," Craig says. "I think anyone who wants to sit down and talk — I'd like to hear their side. I think I'm opinionated, but I'm not so opinionated that I can't see the forest for the trees.

"As far as to run in there and change everything, that's an impossibility." As a newcomer, he does not have all the information yet, Craig says, but he would approach problems of economic expansion, zoning and the budget with an open mind.

Craig, 52, has lived in Twin Falls since 1941. He moved here from Iowa when he was a boy. He graduated from Twin Falls High School.

He has done a variety of work, but currently, he runs Sentry Security, a business that specializes in private investigations and serving civil papers. He recently was hired by the county to investigate claims for indigents' medical bills.

Craig, who lives at 1755 Falls Ave. E., may also be known to residents as the former president of the Bruin Booster Club in the 1981-82 school year. He also has been a master of the Masonic Lodge. He has three sons and two daughters. One son works for the city as an engineer.

"The economy of the whole city is a problem. They are just like everybody else, they are short of money. They can only do so much," he says.

Cutbacks generally have been handled well, he believes. But the city is still going through a learning process with the economy. It must now ask, "How are we going to pay the rent?" he says.

Cutbacks have made everyone stop and think about the need for planning, he says. "If I make the City council, there are going to be a lot of 'whys' asked."

Many of these budgetary questions would be for his own benefit, Craig says, but he also is not sure the city's resources are being spread around appropriately.

He says he thinks the Police Department has done a tremendous job. He also thinks the city has done well developing its parks and recre-

City offers exercise classes

TWIN FALLS — Registration for a new round of Twin Falls Recreation Department aerobics classes will continue through Friday.

The beginner, intermediate and advanced six-week sessions will be taught by Sheri Hull. Pre-registration is required, and enrollment will be limited. The classes cost from $15 to $20, with special rates for couples and senior citizens.

For more information, call 733-0860 or 324-1139.

Do you remember the ferries?

TWIN FALLS — The South Central Idaho History Council would like to know what area residents can remember about ferries on the Snake River.

The council, which was formed by amateur and professional historians last spring, will sponsor a workshop on the subject this Friday.

Council spokesman Jim Gentry, a CSI history professor, says there was a time when close to 20 ferries plied the river between the Raft River and Bliss. Some were in use until fairly recently, he says.

Records of the ferries could provide valuable social and economic information about the history of the region, he says.

Representatives of the group will be in the study-skills center of the Vo-Tech Center at the College of Southern Idaho from 4 to 8 p.m. Friday.

The group will have copying equipment on hand with which to reproduce old photographs and manuscripts. It also will have tape recorders with which to take down verbal recollections.

Children tip sheriff to jail escapee

TWIN FALLS — A group of children led Twin Falls County sheriff's deputies to a shed Wednesday afternoon where an escaped prisoner was hiding.

Kyle Wynia, 20, of 744 Second Ave. W. in Twin Falls, was captured about two blocks away from the jail, a short time after he broke away from two deputies, said Sheriff Jim Munn.

At about 2 p.m., Wynia had been brought to the booking area of the jail, after his arraignment in Fifth District Magistrate Court on grand theft and burglary charges. Since his arrest earlier Wednesday, Wynia had been in the Twin Falls City Jail, Munn said.

While two deputies were taking Wynia, who was not handcuffed, to the elevator to be taken upstairs to the jail, he broke free and ran out a door, Munn said.

About four or five deputies gave pursuit in cars and on foot. Twin Falls police also were notified.

About two blocks away, near the 300 block of Fifth Avenue North, a group of small children "looked at me and pointed to a shed," said Munn, who also joined in the chase. The shed was located behind a home.

Wynia was found in the shed, hiding underneath an old cupboard, the sheriff said.

There were no injuries during the incident.

Munn said he will consult with the prosecutor's office about possible charges as a result of Wynia's escape attempt.

Earlier in the day, Wynia was arraigned on two grand theft charges. One stemmed from an Oct. 23 incident, in which a man claims that Wynia grabbed his wallet and ran. A woman also claims that Wynia stole $200 from her residence on Oct. 29, according to the complaints filed against the suspect.

Wynia also faces a second-degree burglary charge for allegedly taking a gun from a truck on Oct. 16.

The public defender has been appointed to represent Wynia on the charges. He is being held in jail, in lieu of $10,000 bond.

wanted to return something to the community.

The Twin Falls Bank and Trust gift, composed of funds from its employees and the bank, was the largest contribution to date, and about $2,000 more than its gift last year, Sinclair says.

On a one-to-one basis, Sinclair says, most contributions have increased over last year.

"And, that gives us reason to be optimistic, but we still are short of our goal, and that gives us reason to be concerned."

Sinclair is urging volunteers and contributors to return pledge cards as soon as possible. About a third of the hundreds of cards distributed have not been returned, he says, but he expects a few large contributions in the next week.

The United Way member agencies include the American Red Cross, the Salvation Army, several senior-citizen centers, the YFCA, Arthritis Foundation and the Boy and Girl Scout organizations.

Mary Afton Nelson

BURLEY — Mary Afton Nelson, 72, of Burley, died Tuesday evening at Cassia Memorial Hospital.

Born Sept. 8, 1911, in Teton, Idaho, she later moved to St. Anthony. She married Canova Nelson on Sept. 27, 1936, in the Salt Lake City temple of the Church of Jesus Christ of Latter-day Saints, and they moved to Burley.

Mrs. Nelson had worked as a bookkeeper and had managed the Heller Wholesale Warehouse for 17 years.

She was a member of the Mormon Church in Burley.

Surviving are: her husband of Burley; two daughters, Debbie Olson of Vancouver, Wash., and Michelle Garner of Bozeman, Mont.; a brother, T. Roy Peterson of Idaho Falls; a sister, Cora Nadauld of Idaho Falls; and two grandchildren. A grandson preceded her in death.

The funeral will be held Saturday at 2 p.m. in the Burley Third, Fifth and Seventh Ward Mormon Chapel, with Bishop Don Ray Melling officiating. Burial will be in Pleasant View Cemetery.

Friends may call at McCulloch's Funeral Home in Burley on Friday from 2 to 8:30 p.m. and at the church an hour prior to the service on Saturday.

Mabel Swendig

GOODING — Mabel Swendig, 89, of Gooding, died Tuesday at Skyview Manor nursing home in Twin Falls.

Born Nov. 7, 1893, in St. Paul, Minn., she attended St. Paul schools. She moved with her parents to Harrison, Idaho, in 1910. She married John Swendig in 1913, and they farmed in the Harrison area until 1938.

She later lived and worked in the Bremerton-Seattle, Wash., area. Mr. Swendig died in 1958, and she moved to Gooding in 1966.

She was an active member and past president of the Eagles Lodge, the Rebekah Lodge, the Redmen's Lodge and the Ladies of the Grand Army of the Republic. Mrs. Swendig also was a charter member of the Indian Mountain Grange at Harrison and was a member of the Northside Community Club at Gooding.

Surviving are: a daughter, Dorothy K. Hammond of Gooding; a son, Jimmie E. Swendig of Pleasant Hill, Calif.; six grandchildren; and five great-grandchildren.

She was preceded by a son, Allen, in 1981.

The funeral will be held Friday at 1 p.m. at Demaray's Gooding Chapel, with the Rev. Harold Hake officiating.

Friends may call at the funeral home today from 1 to 7 p.m.

Kenneth Lee Roseth

FILER — Kenneth Lee Roseth, 49, of Filer, died Monday at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center, after a long illness.

Born Aug. 16, 1934, in Deadwood, S.D., he moved to Filer two years ago from Nevada. He had helped start several volunteer fire departments while living in Nevada.

Mr. Roseth was a member of the Fire Chiefs Association and a past president of the Las Vegas Jaycees and the Elks Lodge.

Surviving are: his mother, Jessie M. Walker of Yucca Valley, Calif.; a daughter, Debra Roseth of Amagosa Valley, Nev.; a son, Duke Roseth of Las Vegas; two grandchildren; and a sister, Karen Armstrong of Filer.

A memorial service will be held Friday at 10 a.m. at White Mortuary Chapel in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Father Fred Elwood officiating.

Myrtle B. Larson

SALMON — Myrtle B. Larson, 95, of Salmon, died Monday at the home of her daughter in Salmon.

Born Dec. 2, 1887, in Whitman County, Wash., she moved to Twin Falls in 1925. She married Arvid Larson in 1905 in Kansas. He died in 1969.

She was a member of the Twin Falls United Methodist Church.

Surviving are: two sons, Marvin Larson of Obaldian, Idaho, and Theron Larson of Salmon; a daughter, Doris Guth of Salmon; eight grandchildren; many great-grandchildren; and a sister, Marie Kokel of Portland.

She was preceded in death by two sons, Wallace and Arlon, and a daughter, Florence Robinson.

A graveside service will be held today at 2 p.m. at Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls, with the Rev. Palmer Wylde of Idaho Falls officiating. White Mortuary of Twin Falls is in charge of arrangements.

Services

YOST, Utah — The funeral for Sarah Blanche Loveland Oman, 75, of Yost, who died Monday, will be held today at 1 p.m. in the Aline Mormon Chapel. Burial will be in Yost Cemetery. Friends may call today at the church an hour prior to the service. Payne Mortuary in Burley is in charge of arrangements.

HAILEY — A graveside service for Gaylord A. Peck, 85, of Hailey, who died Sunday, will be held today at 2 p.m. at Hailey Cemetery. Wood River Chapel of Hailey is in charge of arrangements. The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to the Mountain States Tumor Institute in Boise.

TWIN FALLS — A graveside service for Neva M. Edminster, 98, of Twin Falls, who died Monday, will be held today at 11 a.m. in Sunset Memorial Park in Twin Falls. Friends may call at White Mortuary in Twin Falls until 10 a.m. The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to a favorite charity.

PAUL — The funeral for Veta M. Locander, 82, of Paul, who died Monday, will be held at 10 a.m. today in the Paul Mormon Stake Center. Friends may call at the stake center an hour prior to the service. Payne Chapel in Burley is in charge of arrangements. The family suggests that memorial contributions be made to a favorite charity.

GOODING — A memorial service for Carrie Leona Folsom, 89, of Coalinga, Calif., and formerly of Gooding, who died Friday, will be held this Friday at 2 p.m. at Flimwood Cemetery in Gooding. Demaray's Gooding Chapel is in charge of arrangements.

RICHFIELD — The funeral for Estella Edna Clements, 79, of Tacoma, Wash., and formerly of Richfield, who died Wednesday, will be held Friday at 2 p.m. at Bergin Funeral Chapel in Shoshone. Burial will be in Richfield Cemetery.

TWIN FALLS — The funeral for Maurine N. Hansen, 82, of Twin Falls, who died Monday, will be held at 11 a.m. Friday at the Buck-Sullivan Mortuary in Idaho Falls. Burial will be in Rose Hill Cemetery at Idaho Falls.

BURLEY — The funeral for James O. "John" Ashcraft, 82, of Burley, who died Tuesday, will be held at 11 a.m. Friday in the Burley Second, Fourth and 12th Ward Mormon Chapel. Burial will be in Pleasant View Cemetery at Burley. Friends may call at Payne Mortuary in Burley from 6 to 8 p.m. today and at the church an hour prior to the service on Friday.

ation facilities.

"In my own son's case, athletic endeavors made a better kid out of him," he says. Programs such as softball and Little League baseball are essential in a city, he thinks.

The city does have problems with its streets, but by and large, Craig says he thinks they have been maintained pretty well.

In general, he doesn't think there are too many things wrong. The city has stayed within its budget. The quality of life is good here — the city is clean, he says.

"But you have to have growth — you have to move forward," he says. Growth should come in an orderly, planned manner, he says.

The city also could use the "shot in the arm" a new industry would provide. The City Council has to be receptive to the needs of a new industry, he believes. "We really have to see what their problems are."

Zoning could be approached with a more open mind, too, he believes. In general, it should serve the good of all, and resist the demands of a particular group.

He is in favor of the proposed new municipal pool, and Craig thinks it was a good idea to move it back to Harmon Park. Among other reasons, he thinks it is easier for children to reach that location on their own. He says there are a great number of children who enjoyed the pool in the old location.

He also thinks the city was wise to decide to drill its own geothermal well. But he wonders whether the city should not lease the pool to a private operator.

Craig says he will run a door-to-door, handshaking-type of campaign.

"I'll talk to everybody that will stand still long enough for me to talk to them."

Vollmer

Like most other candidates, Vollmer, an active Jaycee member in his younger days, favors steady, controlled growth. "If you don't grow, you are going to regress," he says.

But he sees the problem from a slightly different angle.

"We're so scared of flamboyant development. You're not going to have any rapid development in Twin Falls, Idaho. I've watched planners come through this community for 25 years trying to tell us that we are on the verge of a boom.

"What we have to be careful of is that we get some growth," he says. "You don't understand the competition out there for industry."

The cooperation between the chamber and the city is a real boost to the prospects of economic development in Twin Falls, he says. In the last four years, Vollmer says he has been pleased that an interest in economic development has developed at City Hall.

One area that Vollmer says the city is in better shape now than four years ago is its zoning ordinance and comprehensive plan.

Gone are the days of "pipedreams," such as cleaning up the entire length of Rock Creek Canyon for a city park — that was just too expensive. Burdensome regulations such as design review also have been discarded.

There is now a certain orderliness to zoning procedures, he says. The city is close to having a set of laws that most small businessmen can live with, yet which protect the city from commonly recognized evils, such as strip development, he says.

Good zoning comes down to a really good planner, he says. Such a person has experience, studies other communities and understands what planning is, Vollmer believes. "I'm not sure we have that."

The comprehensive plan also is particularly important, he says. "You don't tell people where to go to do what they want to do, as long as they can stay within our plan."

Vollmer believes the city is providing enough in terms of essential services to residents. In a couple areas, the city may even be providing too much, he says.

In particular, he objects to the city playing the role of "almighty protector." The city should not try to settle property disputes between one citizen and another — the courts exist for that purpose, he says.

He believes a city pool should remain at Harmon Park, although he wonders whether the city is rushing to implement a proposal that could be improved upon. He finds it amazing no cooperation has been forthcoming from other groups.

Vollmer says he thinks it is inevitable that Twin Falls will have another mall, but he thinks the Price Development Co.'s plans are optimistic.

"What we have is a mall that is half-developed (the Blue Lakes Mall), and somebody getting ready to do another one."

Vollmer says he will be effective on the council because he has a broad understanding of the community and the city as a whole.

Piano

While he does not want to appear the "bad guy," Eschenburg says he wants the piano returned so the organization can properly administer the use of the Y's possessions.

Hartgen says the board is bringing the piano back "not to squash the Renaissance Academy, but to enhance its availability to the community."

"I have no problem voting to return the piano to the academy if, one, it is for a specified period of time. And, two, insurance is demonstrated."

A week after the board told Strickland to return the piano, he took out a policy from Keran-Starlin Insurance, which covers up to $20,000 of damage to any property in the academy building. However, a spokesman for the insurance company says that before Oct. 25, the piano was not insured by the academy.

The YFCA, not realizing how valuable the piano was before the controversy started, also has increased its insurance coverage and extended it to include any damage that might occur while the piano is being moved.

Hartgen and Eschenburg agree the piano should be available to groups wanting to borrow it, besides the Renaissance Academy. That has been no problem, Strickland says. The Magic Valley Opera Guild, a user of the instrument for years, is continuing to use it at the academy.

The YFCA agreed to loan the piano to the academy this summer after the Twin Falls Music Club presented a petition to the board. Margaret Vincent says the Sunrise Room at the YFCA was used so often for exercise classes that local music groups could seldom schedule recitals and concerts using the grand piano.

Between recitals, the piano was kept in front of the reception desk, so the receptionist could "keep an eye on it," Eschenburg says. But piano tuner James Osborn told the Music Club that humidity from the pool was harming the piano in the lobby.

Since the piano has been at the academy, it's been used double or triple the amount it was in the entire year before at the YFCA building, Vincent says.

Still, Hartgen says the YFCA, as a long-established community institution and the owner of the piano, should maintain control of it. No loan of the piano will be permanent, he says.

Osborn, who has cared for the piano at both the YFCA and the Academy, says he would like to see the piano left at the Renaissance Academy.

"I'm not saying the Y should give up the piano. The piano is going to be safer at the academy than at the Y, but it is the Y's piano," he says.

"Anyone there (at the academy) appreciates a good piano, but most people going into the Y couldn't care less about it," Osborn says.

Jerome prosecutor to run for Hansen's seat

DANNIS ADAMSON
Worked the Jones campaign

By RICK SHAUGHNESSY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Jerome County Prosecutor Dan Adamson says his decision to oppose Congressman George Hansen in next year's primary election for Idaho's Second Congressional seat didn't come easy.

"I've probably talked myself out of this thing no fewer than six times . . . But I enjoy the political arena and I think this is the right time and the right place to do it," he told The Times-News Wednesday.

The announcement confirms the candidacy of the 32-year-old Twin Falls native against the legally-besieged Hansen. Adamson stated last month that he was considering the challenge.

"I'm a positive enough person that I think I can impress on people that I have as many good qualities as George Hansen, Adamson says. He said his ideas on issues are probably not a great deal different than Hansen's, but he thinks he can be a more effective congressman for the district.

"Our government is made up of a tremendous number of people. To get anything done requires cooperation. It's a matter of negotiation, a matter of being credible, a matter of being respected.

"In those areas I can do a better job than Congressman Hansen — a much better job."

Adamson said Hansen's legal problems — stemming from a federal grand jury indictment on four counts of filing false financial disclosure documents — have to be taking up a great share of the congressman's time and attention to the detriment of constituents.

"He has to be spending too much time on his personal problems."

But Adamson says he would be more effective in other ways.

"I've had an opportunity to see how the recession has affected residents of the Second District," says Adamson, who manages his family's farm in addition to holding down the prosecutor's office and a private legal practice.

"I've been out in the trenches trying to make things work."

He says his experience in agriculture would make him an asset to the district's farmers and ranchers, particularly if he were to serve on the Agriculture Committee.

He said time spent in the Agriculture Committee, an assignment he would pursue if elected, would prove more productive for constituents in the Second District than time spent in the Banking Committee of which Hansen is a member.

Adamson says Hansen's background is not in agriculture and "has not been in Idaho for a very long time. A person in Congress shouldn't necessarily stay forever."

Adamson says the comments he's heard from Second District residents about Hansen are generally: "We've heard too much. We've had enough. Embarrassment."

"They're going to see me as clearly viable."

Adamson is no stranger to Hansen campaigns. In 1978, he was campaign manager for Jim Jones, now the state's attorney general.

Like Hansen and Democratic challenger Richard Stallings, Adamson is a Mormon. That is an asset, he says.

"There are a number of LDS people in the area. Any religious group is prone to support someone of the same denomination."

Adamson is married with two sons. He has been prosecuting attorney for Jerome County since 1982.

He received his law degree from the J. Reuben Clark Law School at Brigham Young University in 1979, and he holds a master's degree in business administration and a bachelor's in music from the University of Utah.

Quake makes City Hall leak

Stress cracks in ceiling, wall

By TERRELL WILLIAMS
Time-News correspondent

HAGERMAN — The Hagerman City Hall may have been damaged by the recent earthquake.

At the Hagerman City Council meeting Tuesday, Mayor Karen Yarbrough said the building had leaked in at least four places during a heavy cloudburst earlier in the day.

"There's a hairline crack on the ceiling and one on this wall," she said pointing to where water had drained from a crack down the wall. In two places containers had to be put under dripping water.

"I'm not too sure if they (the four new cracks) are from that quake . . . but the vibrations could have caused them," the mayor added.

Former city clerk Audrey Hoffman said the city hall bathroom had never leaked before but is leaking now.

Yarbrough said the flat roof will be inspected outside and repaired this week.

In other business:

• Yarbrough announced that voters may register at City Hall until 8 p.m. on Friday. The election for mayor and two city council members will be at City Hall Tuesday from noon to 8 p.m.

• The council ordered 50 new dog tags, noting that all dogs in the city are required to have periodic rabies shots and new tags annually.

• Numerous complaints from residents about people gathering worms in the city park with electric prods was discussed.

Councilman Merle Owsley said the prods were being used by people at the park every night. Although the amount of electricity they used was insignificant, Owsley said, the city would be liable if someone got electrocuted.

"We told them to stop because so many people were calling (to complain or ask what was going on at the park)," Owsley said.

• Due to lack of a quorum, with councilmen Ron Maxwell and Mark Bulduc absent, the meeting will be continued today (Thursday) at 5 p.m. to complete city business.

Council approves new police chief

Times-News correspondent

FILER — Donald Barkley was unanimously approved as the new Filer Police Chief by the City Council Tuesday night.

The 48-year-old Barkley, who lives in Jerome, recently returned to the Magic Valley from Texas where he had been working as an electrician.

From 1975 through 1980, Barkley was a detective with the Jerome Police Department. For eight years prior to that, he was a sergeant on the police force in Galt, Calif. He also worked temporarily on the Filer Police Department in 1980.

Barkley is married and has six grown children.

"I think he'd make us a good man," said Police Commissioner Ron Stokesberry, who recommended Barkley to the council. "I can't find anything bad about the man."

Councilman Bob Fort said he, too, had talked with Barkley's relatives in Jerome and they had only the best to say about the new police chief.

"Filer has a new police chief," Mayor Dyke said smiling.

Patrolman Kevin Davis has been the acting police chief since Gary Roehl resigned in August.

In other business:

• PMF Inc. of Twin Falls submitted the lowest bid of $209,300 to construct a new municipal water tank on the southern edge of the city.

At the recommendation of city engineer Scott Bybee, the council chose a 620,000 gallon glass-lined steel tank with a concrete base to replace the existing rusted one.

The new tank will be funded with a $346,700 grant from the U.S. Department of Housing and Urban Development.

Bybee said once he receives approval from the state Division of Economic and Community Affairs, which is administering the grant, PMF will be able to lay the concrete base.

The steel tank itself will be shipped in panels in approximately two weeks, he said.

Since $35,000 of the grant will be applied to design, administration and legal fees and $42,000 will apply to electrical work, Bybee said almost $270,000 will be left over for the project.

So any money remaining from the tank construction will be used to replace water pipes within the city, he said.

• The council revised the 15-year-old sanitation ordinance that includes what kind of rubbish can be disposed and the times for pickup.

Using the amended ordinance specifications, the council will accept bids for city trash collection from contractors Dec. 6, which is the next regular council meeting.

School officer involved with youths

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times News writer

JEROME — It was a long, interesting road that brought Larry Gold to Jerome County from previous careers in New York City and Santa Barbara, Calif.

And his present work with students might seem pretty "small potatoes" to a man who has worked on major crimes including murders, drug cases and the Patty Hearst case during his 20-year law enforcement career.

But Gold says he likes being Jerome's first "community diversion coordinator."

The pay is low, he says, but the work is rewarding. As a coordinator between law enforcement and the Jerome School District, Gold says he does everything from helping a student get her $2 back on a questionable magazine sale to helping locate individuals responsible for drug supplies to young students.

"It's very demanding," he says. "When I took the job, I had a lot of goals, but I find the task is already too big for one person. There are so many kids who need attention."

'There are so many kids who need attention,' — Larry Gold

Gold's work takes him from the Jerome Police Department to an office in the basement of the Jerome Junior High School. For this year, he is paid with a federal grant but isn't sure what will transpire in the years ahead, or even if the program will continue.

He says his job is to gain the respect and rapport of the students and to work out solutions for an individual in trouble.

Whenever possible, he handles the latter through a "behavior contract." This saves embarrassment and a bad record for a student and saves the county and city money in prosecution and court time.

"In the past, a juvenile offender in Jerome County was either warned and released, or he went to court, Gold says.

"Now we give them an alternative. Under the behavior agreement, we actually have a contract with the child — probably the first contract he or she encounters and one that is just as legal and binding as if it involved purchase of a car."

Gold says, through this contract, a youth is on probation status and agrees to certain regulations for an assigned period of time. A successful completion of the contract for the specified time results in dropping the charge. Otherwise, it's into court for the youngster.

The door to his office is open and students are welcome to drop in. They do just that — to chat about a basketball game or upcoming school projects. Often they ask a hypothetical question about "a friend" with a certain problem.

"I always explain what I think they should advise that "friend" and hope they take my advice. Sometimes the boy or girl will break down before leaving and tell me it's actually their problem and ask some more detailed questions. This always helps," Gold said.

Gold says he would rather help than punish young first-time offenders. And prevention is a major part of his theory in working with youth, he adds.

In a recent Jerome case, he says, he entered a home in the presence of a family and arrested the father at gun point. Gold says he knew the man kept a gun and it was close at hand when he entered the home.

"It was a very tense situation and not a happy one for the children who watched the procedure, he said.

"After the man was booked, I went back and spent some time with his children, finally getting them to smile and even laugh. I don't think they will grow up hating police officers," he says.

Gold says he enjoys his relationship with school youngsters and with a very few exceptions has had little trouble.

He was selected for the first such position in Jerome from a large field of applicants. Dr. Stephenson Youngerman, Jerome School superintendent, who pioneered this type of position in Idaho schools, worked with city officials to select Gold.

Youngerman said the program is working well in Jerome and he believes it will continue to improve as Gold has an opportunity to work with more of the young students.

Police Chief Darryl Cameron says Gold "is good with the kids and has solved several cases for us including two drug cases. I am very pleased with the way things are working out."

In 1977, Gold was "medically retired" from law enforcement after a painful and serious back injury. He wasn't shot down in action, but rather slipped on a wet step leading from his office, crushing two vertebrae.

In his collection of memorabilia is a personal letter received from President Ronald Reagan just after the injury. In the letter, the president

Let's dispel popular, but foolish, myths about pregnancy

Diana Hooley
Country neighbors

Being an expectant mother, I'd like to dispel some myths currently popularized by the media about such said condition.

Myth No. 1 concerns the magazine ads of a woman expecting a baby and serenely gazing out the window. We've all seen them, there've been a number of them advertising various products.

This mother-to-be has fine features, an aquiline nose, beautifully coiffed hair and a Dior gown on. She is the picture of contentment and liveliness.

It's lies, all lies.

I mean, how many pregnant women go through their day wearing false eyelashes and a nightgown? That doesn't mean some of us wouldn't like to wear a free-flowing nightie instead of pouring ourselves into the latest cutesy maternity top, with "Baby Bustin Loose" or some darn thing embroidered on the front.

And speaking of wardrobes, Myth No. 2 deals with the notion that pregnant women will look great on the beach this summer in the latest line of maternity swimwear. Of course, all the women in the ads are models with pillows stuffed in their suits, but who cares?

I'll tell you who cares. The rest of us mothers carrying our third or fourth child with the varicose veins and stretch marks that would make a good road map. You wouldn't catch me dead in a swimsuit while I'm pregnant.

Oh, there are some expectant mothers who look OK in one, basically because they've kept their weight gain confined to the bulge in the front.

But I'm like a lot of other mothers who, when they find out they're pregnant, let their conscience take a vacation and their appetite work overtime. We not only need a stretch panel across the stomach but one on the backside too.

Myth No. 3 has to do with sleep. How many times have I read, "Most doctors agree that expectant mothers should get extra rest." It sounds so good in print, I just wish it was a realistic possibility.

If you are a first-time mom in this day and age, chances are you work, at least part-time. What would the boss say if your 10-minute break turned into an hour snooze? If he made a federal case out of it you could always plead pregnancy and throw the latest printed doctor's recommendations in his face.

If you're like myself, and already have children, rest and sleep is something reserved for your death bed. Naps are pure folly with a rambunctious 2-year-old and your regular night sleep begins as soon as you can coerce the kids into going to bed.

My sleep starts and stops throughout the night, depending on who needs a drink and who needs to go to the bathroom. With dawn's early light, the rockets don't red glare, but the alarm clock rings.

Myth No. 4 is about pregnant women and exercise. Yes, I realize there have been tennis players who play tennis almost to their delivery date, but I swear if I played a vigorous game of tennis at five months, I'd deliver on the court.

I'm not against exercise during pregnancy: I just think we should be more realistic about it. Doing sit-ups to jazz music between bouts of morning sickness is not my idea of fun.

Leaves overpower sweeper

By BONNIE BAIRD JONES
Times-News writer

JEROME — A 10-year-old street sweeper with mechanical problems has prompted the Jerome City Council to ask help from community residents in cleaning up fall leaves.

Councilman Walter Bentzinger told the council the sweeper must have a minimum repair that would run about $1,500, but that what it really needs is a $10,000 rebuilding job.

"There isn't any money this year for that, so we would have to get by until next year," he said.

On Bentzinger's recommendation, the council voted to attempt to lease a sweeper for 30 days to handle the current fall leaf cleanup and to send the city's sweeper in for rebuilding next year. Bentzinger said a new unit would cost about $75,000.

To further help the cause along, Councilwoman Jeanne Vandiver suggested that residents be asked to rake up their own leaves that fall on their property and in the streets and put them in containers for the city sanitation contractor to pick up.

"I think we could ask the people to get involved with community matters and help out in cases like this," she said. "This is something the council's public relations committee might handle."

John Cook, street superintendent, who attended the meeting on another matter, said the equipment works in dust and dirt most of the time and this acts as an abrasive that simply wears out the moving parts. He said there are many things wrong with the machine and he said rebuilding is the only answer if the city can't afford a new one.

The annual financial report of the street department shows expenses exceeded revenue by about $17,000. Several major street projects were completed this year but the department budget will have to make up for the difference in the coming year, it was noted.

In other business:

• The council approved a contract for 1984 with Attorney Rob Williams for legal services. He will receive $1,009 per month with additional pay for unusually demanding criminal or civil cases.

• Action was delayed until the next meeting on a request from Mountain Bell to lease its former temporary office building across the street from City Hall. Mayor Ralph Peters asked council members to think about the request for a couple of weeks.

He said the building was approved for temporary use for about two years because the utility planned a new building. Mountain Bell in Jerome has now moved into another permanent building, leaving the temporary structure vacant. Peters said the building was not intended for permanent use.

• The council appointed William Allred to the volunteer fire department staff on the recommendation of Fire Chief Lynn Bingham.

• Nov. 10 at 8 p.m. was set as the time for canvassing the votes of the Nov. 8 municipal election.

• The council granted a request from city employees who want to work on the Nov. 11 holiday and take the day off Friday following Thanksgiving.

• The city sanitation contract for the coming year was discussed, but the council delayed action pending additional information.

Council approves fire chief's car

RUPERT — The Rupert fire chief will be getting a new car.

The Rupert City Council agreed Tuesday that replacement of the chief's 7-year-old vehicle was a necessary expenditure.

"The longevity and the service we would get out of a more heavy-duty car would pay off in the long run," noted Councilwoman June Dornbeck.

Bids for the new car for the fire chief, plus an additional vehicle to be added to the fleet of police cars, will be opened at next month's regular council meeting, the council decided.

In other business:

• The council announced the low bidder for a water distribution line on North D Street, but held off awarding the contract.

Five bids, ranging from $156,000 to Intermountain Irrigation's low bid of $99,000, were received by the council.

Mayor Bill Whittom said the Housing and Urban Development project is part of a "continuing effort to loop water lines together and improve water quality and pressure in the city."

The council indicated it would award the contract at its Dec. 6 meeting.

• The council adopted an ordinance to adjust city electric rates because of a Supreme Court decision that says Rupert can no longer collect money for the terminated Washington Public Power Supply System.

However, no exact figures on how the decision will affect electric bills were made available.

Whittom said the subject will again be discussed at the next council meeting when figures should be made available.

wished him well, encouraging him not to give up, but to simply change his career plans and go on with worthwhile things.

Gold followed that advice and joined a world-wide commercial roofing firm headquartered in New York City after his initial recovery.

When he and his wife, Debbie, tired of life in the busy city, they began a systematic study of the United States for a new home. Magic Valley was one of three finalists in that contest, and after visiting the others in South Carolina and Vermont, they settled on Magic Valley. The house and acreage that suited their needs was found two miles south of Eden.

This meant the family lived in Eden and Gold flew home from New York about once a month. One weekend when he was home, he said, it occurred to him that he didn't want to leave.

Now recovered from his injury, and having completed further education in business management, he began launching his own construction business in Magic Valley. But meanwhile, the newspaper advertising for the Jerome position caught his eye. He applied and got the job. His law enforcement experience has included providing security plans for such dignitaries as the Shah of Iran and President Reagan.

Born in New York, he worked as a police officer there until moving to California where he later became a special agent with the Santa Barbara Sheriff's Office and took over an entire regional investigative service, supervising 23 agencies.

It was in this capacity that he became involved in the Patty Hearst case and in many other major crimes in the country.

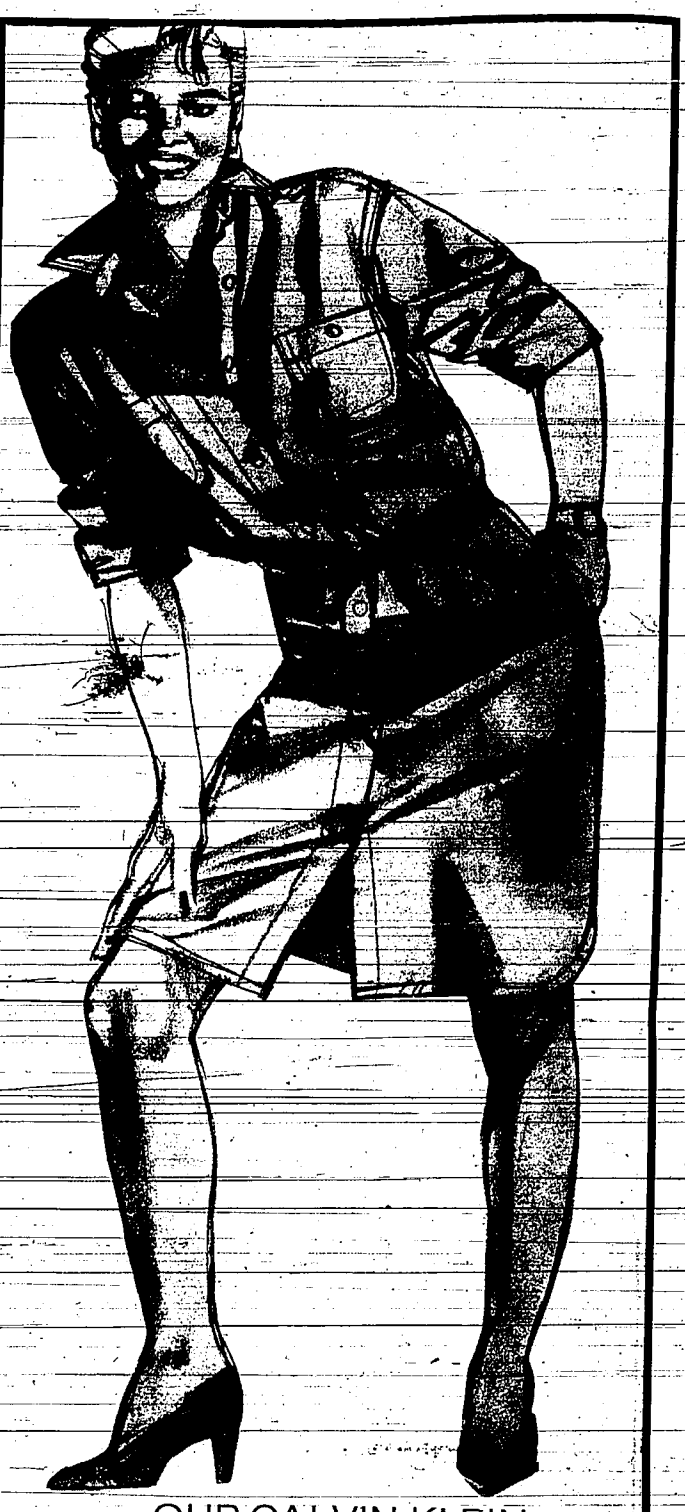

Gold is now using his experience and training to show his young admirers, and some who may not be admirers, how to face their problems.

School administrator holds public accountable in Minidoka County

By SARAH MURPHY

Mini-Cassia

RUPERT — Gene Snapp, superintendent of the Minidoka County School District, doesn't mince words when discussing goals for improving the school system.

"We're all in this together; we want the most for our districts, but we expect the most from the people involved in the system," he says.

Snapp doesn't exclude anyone from this category: school board, administration, parents, teachers and students, and the public in general. All must share in the responsibility for self-improvement, he says.

"Basically, it boils down to one thing — the public will get what it is willing to pay for," says Snapp.

Although money is a necessary consideration in running the school district, Snapp points out that other priorities are equally important.

Goals that Snapp would like to see accomplished in his district include evaluating and improving the curriculum.

"By next year we hope to meet the graduation requirements set forth by the Commission of Educational Excellence," he says.

"Secondly," continues Snapp, "we intend to comply with the 90 percent attendance requirement adopted by the State Board of Education.

"This means that every person will have to do his part — students will have to be responsible for their own attendance records, and parents will have to make an effort to help their children realize this responsibility," he says.

Snapp also wants teachers to raise their expectations of their own performances as well as that of their students.

"Parents must accept expectations set down for their children, to give them the love and the time necessary to help them to achieve," says Snapp.

"The community should be willing to expect more from all of us," he says. "They should demand more from the scool board and administration, to set policies and to see that adequate funds are available to carry them out."

Snapp is an advocate of continued improvement in instructional levels and says teachers must adjust their offerings in their classes to fulfill the academic needs of students.

"They must follow such a course not only using academic expertise but by also using human compassion as guidelines. They must take into consideration the individual needs of their students," he adds.

Snapp says most teachers are underpaid and underappreciated. As a remedy for that situation, he proposed a program for teacher recognition which he is using this year, he says.

Each teacher nominated from their own buildings as candidates for State Teacher of the Year will receive recognition from the district as teacher of the month.

"Sometimes we find it easier to tell people what they're doing wrong," adds Snapp. "I think it's even more important to take the time to give them the praise which they deserve."

Snapp sees district principals as leaders.

"I expect them to meet challenges and problems, to deal with the public, to work with their staff through class visitations, meetings and conferences to see that goals are met."

Snapp continues, "They must know students and parents — to help them overcome educational problems; basically, to be the educational leaders of the schools."

Snapp, who is in his second year as school superintendent, has been both a teacher and a principal.

Projects cultivate business

GLENNS FERRY — The Glenns Ferry Chamber of Commerce Merchant's Committee is moving ahead with several projects in an effort to promote the city's businesses.

Ron Crone, the committee chairman, said the group is currently concerned with making large city maps to show the location of businesses and parks in the town.

Crone said Don Black of Hammett will do the art work and those businesses interested in being included on the map should contact Crone at Hanson's Cafe, which he manages.

"We're asking $25 to cover the expenses of the map from each participating merchant," said Crone.

"We estimate the maps will cost $250, not including the installation fee."

Crone said the committee would eventually like to see four city maps financed and put at each end of Glenns Ferry, in the center of the city, and one at the Three Island State Park.

The Merchant's Committee also has in the works a special Christmas shopping day downtown similar to what other towns have had, said Crone.

Special drawings, cash prizes, and discounts will be featured throughout the day, which is tentatively set the Saturday after Thanksgiving.

Crone said the Merchant's Committee is also hoping to sponsor a special movie night with refreshments for the local kids close to the Christmas holidays. But, he added, details have not been worked out yet.

As the new chairman of the Merchant's Committee, Crone said he's hoping to see more participation in the committee by local merchants.

"We just want to tell everyone we meet at noon at Hanson's on Thursday and all are welcome, especially the merchants.

"We need their ideas," said Crone.

Area teacher of the year pursues basic elements of solid education

By SARAH MURPHY
Times-News correspondent

RUPERT — "To reach a child's mind you have to capture his heart," says Robert Miller, social sciences teacher at East Minico Junior High.

Miller has been selected by his teaching colleagues and the parents of East Minico as the outstanding teacher of the year in the Minidoka County District.

His philosophy of teaching is based on three simple words: accept, respect and expect.

"A child needs to be accepted, liked, encouraged and amused as well as expected to perform to the best of his or her abilities," says Miller.

A second point, which is equally important, he says, is to avoid prejudging the students who enter his classroom each year.

"Respect goes in both directions; it's a two-way street," he says. "Labeling is disabling."

Miller says children have a tendency to live up to negative predictions given by parents and teachers. He says this process can be reversed by expecting high standards and performances from his students.

Miller says the more demanding a teacher is of himself, the more his students will receive from him.

"Each lesson should include something extra or special. And at the same time, the more preparation you have made, the more success you will enjoy."

He is particularly attentive to utilization of class time, saying it is important every minute of that time is planned for.

"Too many teachers waste valuable time in the classroom — lack of planning is responsible for this and lack of caring enough to do it," he says.

Miller contends that a teacher must set a priority; if he is sincere, that priority will be his classroom.

"The teacher makes the classroom — you control what is done every minute — you use every minute and make the time count."

Miller places responsibility for improving educational standards on all who are involved in the system: teachers, administrators, school boards, parents and students.

The primary responsibility falls on the parents. He says, "Parents aren't always parenting as well as they should — they leave too much of the responsibility for the children to others. The parent should be directly involved in the educational process.

"For example, if I have a good day and set a positive example, the kids will follow suit," he says. Miller believes that the principle applies to everyone in the system, particularly parents.

"The attitude problem, in whatever context, is the only problem in education — nothing should be impossible if we all have the right attitudes," he contends.

One of the changes that Miller wants to see in education is to reduce the amount of federal involvement in the system.

He would also like to see teachers change some of their priorities. He says state and national teacher organizations tend to get involved with issues that aren't going to help the kids that much.

"The educators should be in the classroom teaching," he says.

Miller teaches a total of 162 students each day, averaging 27 in each class. He says that each one of these kids is equally important.

He has been in the classroom for 14 years and says "I'm a lucky man. I get to do the thing I like best -- teaching."

What's up at CSI

Fall festival begins Friday

TWIN FALLS — The third annual Harvest Festival, sponsored by the College of Southern Idaho Management Association Club, will be held this Friday through Sunday at the CSI Expo Center.

The festival will have more than 70 booths, which will feature arts and crafts, unique and unusual items. There will be free entertainment provided by Magic Valley groups, along with door prizes given every one or two hours.

On Friday, the festival hours will be 3 to 9 p.m., on Saturday, from 10 a.m. to 9 p.m., and on Sunday, from 11 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Proceeds from the event will go to the management association. Students will use the funds to travel to conventions and enter competitions, as well as for school and community projects.

Hailey will host workshop

HAILEY — "Changing Lifestyles and Surviving It" will be the theme of the first traveling workshop from the Center for New Directions at CSI.

The workshop will be held from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m. on Wednesday, Nov. 16, at the Hailey Senior Citizen Center.

The day-long session will include information on: "Understanding and Managing Your Stress," from Marilee Kohtz, a counselor for the center; "So You Still Feel Guilty?" by Rita Larom, the center director; and "Where Do I Go From Here?" by Cara Nielsen, who is head of the community-education program in Minidoka County and has a master's degree in speech pathology.

The workshop is being sponsored jointly by the Blaine County Community Education program and the Center for New Directions.

For more information, call Florence Blanchard at 788-2033 or Larom at 733-9554, extension 361.

Divorce support group starts

TWIN FALLS — The Center for New Directions at CSI will sponsor a divorce support-group meeting from 5:30 to 7 p.m. on Monday, Nov. 14, at the center building, at 1060 Washington St. N.

The support group is for men and women who are having difficulties adjusting to single living. It will be an informal, sharing group.

For more information, call 733-9554, extension 361.

Bored with your present job?

TWIN FALLS — Adults who are seeking a new career or a change in their present occupation may be interested in the "Out of the Maze" class, which will begin next Tuesday, Nov. 8, in Room 104 of the Shields Building.

Rita Larom, the director of the Center for New Directions, which will host the class, says there are no "crystal-ball" guarantees, but the class will include a number of exercises to show individuals their talents, as well as interests and abilities they may not have considered. It will include interest testing, career exploration, assessing current skills and writing resumes.

The class will meet from 7 to 9 p.m. for six consecutive Tuesdays. It will cost $25. For more information, call 733-9554, extension 361. Pre-registration is requested but not required.

Computer classes in Burley

BURLEY — An "Introduction to Small Computers" class will be offered by CSI two different times this month in the Burley Mall.

The course will offer basic information on computers. It will last nine hours and cost $27.

The first section will be held from 6:30 to 9:30 p.m. Nov. 8, 9 and 10. The second section will be held from 5 to 7 p.m. on Nov. 14, 5 to 8 p.m. on Nov. 15, and 5 to 7 p.m. on Nov. 17 and 18.

The classes will be limited to 20 students. Participants may register by calling 733-9554, extension 312.

Infant car-seat rentals will begin next month

TWIN FALLS — The South Central Medical Auxiliary has collected and purchased enough infant car seats to begin renting them on Dec. 1, as planned.

The auxiliary still plans to raise about $5,000 more, enough to buy 170 additional car seats. So far, however, the group has donated 207 seats to begin a car-seat rental program at Magic Valley Regional Medical Center.

In the new program, a car seat will be rented for $10 for nine months. After the nine months, $7 will refunded if the seat is returned in good condition.

The president of the auxiliary — a group of doctors' wives — Margi Humphrey, says that after nine months, an infant needs a larger car seat. While the auxiliary will not rent the larger seats, it hopes parents will be used to securing their children and buy their own.

The only requirement for parents wishing to rent a car seat is attendance at a "how-to" workshop. Participants also will be given a coupon for a 25 percent discount on the purchase of an infant car seat at many area businesses.

Humphrey says much of the money and many of the car seats donated to the program came from area car dealers, including Ace Hansen Chevrolet, Canyon Motors Subaru, Carpenter's Imports, Kelley Motors, Roy Raymond Ford and Wills Motor Co., all of Twin Falls, and Dave Munroe Chevrolet of Buhl.

Parents can put their name on a waiting list for the rented car seats by calling Jo Teater at 737-2166.

Hansen fights indictments at court

By ELIZABETH OLSON
United Press International

WASHINGTON — Rep. George Hansen, the first congressman indicted for violations of the Ethics and Government Act, asked the Supreme Court Wednesday to throw out the charges.

Hansen, R-Idaho, was indicted by a federal grand jury in April on four felony charges for allegedly failing to comply with the income disclosure requirements of the 1978 ethics law.

He failed to convince lower courts to dismiss the indictment on grounds it violated the Constitution's speech and debate clause, which protects members of Congress from being prosecuted for their official actions.

U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals for the District of Columbia on Aug. 1 rejected his constitutional claims in a four-paragraph opinion.

He appealed that ruling to the Supreme Court, urging it to decide whether the required filing of financial statements is protected by the speech and debate clause.

His lawyer argued that, because the financial disclosure reports filed by members of Congress "constitute an integral part of the participation by members in the discharge of congressional disciplinary authority specifically placed by the constitution within the jurisdiction of the House, they are protected by the 'speech or debate clause.'"

Hansen also argued that his prosecution robs his constituents of representation.

"The loss of Congresman Hansen's vote during the weeks he spends in trial can not be said to be inconsequential to the voters of the 2nd District of Idaho. If indeed it could ever be said to be inconsequential," his lawyer argued.

The indictment accuses Hansen of failing to disclose four major financial transactions on disclosure reports for 1978, 1979, 1980 and 1981. They included a $61,503 personal loan made to his wife, Connie, by Texas billionaire Nelson Bunker Hunt.

If convicted, the seven-term congressman could be sentenced to up to five years in jail and fined $10,000 on each count.

Hansen has charged he is the victim of selective prosecution by the Justice Department "to silence my opposition to federal intrusion into all our lives through uncontrolled taxation policies and enforcement procedures."

Idaho

Parents back accused

CALDWELL (UPI) — The parents of a 35-year-old man charged with kidnapping and killing a young Nampa schoolgirl testified Wednesday their son was staying at their home in Redmond, Ore., at the time of the slaying.

Irvin and Alma Fain told a Third District jury their son, Charles I. Fain, was living at their home from December of 1981 until early March, 1982.

Nine-year-old Daralyn Johnson was abducted while walking to school on Feb. 24, 1982. Her body was found a week later in a stream feeding the Snake River west of Nampa. Pathologists said the girl had been raped before she was drowned.

The testimony of the parents corroborated statements made on the witness stand Tuesday by the defendant. Fain told jurors he was at his parents' home in Oregon when Miss Johnson was killed.

He also said, "It's just not my personality to bother a young girl."

Irvin Fain, questioned by defense attorney Van Bishop, testified his son accompanied him on trips.

Governor seeks new election

BOISE (UPI) — Lawyers for Gov. John Evans and a group of northern Idaho residents are calling for a special legislative election this fall to clear up legal conflicts in the state's reapportionment dispute.

In documents filed Tuesday with the state Supreme Court, lawyers Pat Costello, representing Evans, and Ray Givens of Coeur d'Alene argued an election should be conducted based on the reapportionment formula recently handed down by First District Judge Dar Cogswell of Sandpoint.

Givens said citizens would question the validity of the 1984 Legislature if it includes representatives elected under the 1982 reapportionment law that Cogswell ruled unconstitutional.

If lawmakers meet without holding a special election, Idahoans might challenge the constitutionality of its legislation, Givens said.

"To condone such a double standard is not good government," he said. Givens represents several Kootenai County residents who successfully urged Cogswell to reject the '82 law because it placed parts of some counties into different legislative districts.

Cogswell eventually imposed his own reapportionment formula — now on appeal to the state's high court — that would add 21 seats in the Legislature from seven new multi-county "floterial" districts.

"A double standard which allows the members of one of the institutions of government (the Legislature) to ignore the Constitution, but at the same time requires the general populace to comply with the rest of the laws, is bound to undermine the confidence that the general populace has in all of our institutions of government," Givens said.

Diesel spill still puzzling

BOISE (UPI) — The state's fisheries manager said Wednesday he still is working on a damage assessment from an August diesel fuel spill that killed fish in the Little Salmon River and could not predict when the report might be issued.

Dave Hansen of the Idaho Fish and Game Department also declined to release preliminary results of his inquiry into the impact of the tanker truck accident on fisheries in the western Idaho river.

The official said he had not been able to complete the report because he faced deadlines on several other projects, including preparation of fishing regulations for next year.

Deputy Attorney General Steve Goddard said on Sept. 6 he was waiting to see the report to determine whether a civil suit should be filed against the company whose tanker truck slid into the river Aug. 19.

Officials initially said the spill killed thousands of rainbow, steelhead, salmon and whitefish when an estimated 2,800 gallons of diesel leaked into the stream after the truck — owned by Arrow Transportation of Boise — jackknifed on U.S. 95 near Riggins.

Man arrested in drug prob

BOISE (UPI) — FBI agents arrested a 50-year-old Arkansas native Wednesday on a federal drug-smuggling indictment from Florida, saying he allegedly fled to Idaho to elude prosecution in the South.

John W. Trulove was arrested without incident after he was stopped while driving along Fairview Avenue in Boise, said William Fallin, head of the FBI's Idaho-Montana Division in Butte, Mont.

Trulove was taken to the Ada County Jail in lieu of $250,000 bond and will appear before a federal magistrate in Boise Nov. 10 for a hearing on his possible extradition to Florida, officials said.

FBI agent George Sinclair of Boise said Trulove was accused by an Orlando, Fla., U.S. District Court grand jury in May of smuggling 750 pounds of high-grade marijuana into the United States from the Caribbean in spring 1981.

Trulove faces counts of conspiracy to import a controlled substance and importation of a controlled substance.

Men battle quake water flooding mine

By BRUCE BOTKA
United Press International

Silver miners labored more than 1,000 feet underground Wednesday to stem the flow of water into a shaft flooded by an earthquake in central Idaho that damaged hundreds of buildings and killed two children.

In Boise, about 70 evacuated government workers returned to city hall after emergency crews repaired a support beam thrown off-center by tremors that rocked seven Western states Friday and registered 6.9 on the Richter scale.

National Guard troops inspected buildings in the quake-stricken region Wednesday to determine if severely damaged structures should be demolished or repaired in the aftermath of the largest tremor to hit the continental United States in 24 years.

Clayton Silver Mine officials in Custer County said they were unable to contain water that filled more than 100 feet of a shaft stretching 1,100 feet below ground about 25 miles west of the quake's epicenter in the foothills of Mount Borah.

Mine manager Roland Rovetto said twin 4-by-4-foot chambers were filling at a rate of about three inches per hour.

"We were losing about 16 inches per hour before we finally got our pumps going," Rovetto said. "It's slowed down, but it's still more than we can pump."

Flow from an underground water channel was about 1,000 gallons per minute before the earthquake, but the mine has been flooded by about 2,500 gallons per minute since the channel was altered by the quake and by aftershocks that registered up to 5.5 on the open-ended scale.

Boise city hall was evacuated Tuesday and shut down when engineers discovered the 27-foot-long beam was dangerously off-center, resting on only one-quarter inch of support.

Building inspector Tim Hogland said crews worked overnight rigging an intricate support system to protect the building from possibly intense aftershocks. Officials continued to check for more damage while planning permanent repairs.

Hogland said the beam supports the second story of the four-floor building, adding another quake "would take it right down to the basement."

Geologists who analyzed a nearly continuous series of tremors near the epicenter between Challis and Mackay said a severe aftershock may occur during the next few weeks.

In Challis, sheriff's dispatchers said searchers had found no signs of hunters trapped or hurt by debris from the quake.

Idaho National Guard teams inspected buildings Wednesday in Challis and nearby Mackay to determine whether aging brick structures that suffered serious damage should be demolished.

Panel eyes WPPSS

SEATTLE (UPI) — The much-discussed question of whether Washington Public Power Supply System project 3 should be re-started immediately, later or never was before the Northwest Power Planning Council again Wednesday.

The council has undertaken a new study as to the cost effectiveness of the project when measured against the region's expected future power needs and against the cost of other energy sources.

A weighty report issued by the council's staff finds the WPPSS project at Satsop, Wash., cost-effective in three-out-four power load forecasts. Only under the lowest forecast of energy needs over the next two decades is the plant held to be unneeded.

Under the low forecast, conservation alone would meet all the region's energy needs into the year 2002.

Public utilities, backed by the Bonneville Power Administration's underwriting, own 70 percent of WPPSS 3. Four Northwest private utilities own the other 30 percent.

Mix-up helps three robbers

PARMA (UPI) — A communications mix-up involving three law enforcement agencies may have allowed three robbery suspects to get away with more than $1,000 from a Parma gas station, the police chief says.

Chief Francis Howery said Tuesday an arrest warrant was being circulated in Western states for a man traveling with a teenage girl and boy. The three are suspected of the theft Monday at the New Valley Service Station.

The suspects were stopped by police in Burns, Ore., several hours after the robbery, but officers did not take them into custody, Howery said.

Dick Appleton, operations officer at the Canyon County sheriff's office in Caldwell, said the Oregon officers had received no instructions to apprehend the trio.

Howery said a teletype sent by Parma police asked that the man be held if he was spotted, but Appleton disagreed.

The Canyon County officer said he told Burns police to hold the man if they found evidence implicating him in the theft, but they did not.

35 convicts held in prison lockdown

BOISE (UPI) — Idaho Penitentiary Warden Darrol Gardner said Wednesday 35 inmates will remain locked in their cells around the clock until guards determine tensions have dropped in the wake of a prison-wide security lockdown.

The desert prison's 910 inmates were ordered into their cells for a lockdown and head count Tuesday night after an electrical storm knocked out the complex's regular power supply and briefly disabled the emergency generator.

A half-dozen inmates in one wing of a close-custody cellblock resisted the move and had to be pushed into their cells by guards, Gardner said.

During the disturbance, several of the inmates in the 35-prisoner wing started small fires with scraps of paper, but no one was injured and no damage occurred, he said.

The general lockdown was lifted at 8:20 p.m. after normal power was restored, but the wing where the uprising occurred was to be kept under top security until "we sort out what went on in there," Gardner said.

"We're just going to wait and see if they've calmed down and more or less assure us they're not going to continue to create problems," he said. "Then we'll lift the lockdown."

The warden said the lockdown was issued because the prison's perimeter lighting does not operate at full power when the emergency generator is used, although interior illumination remains the same.

After the main power supply was cut, the backup generator also was knocked out by the storm, he said. But both disruptions in the generator were brief, the warden said.

"We decided to have a general lockdown and have a count simply because of the lighting problems," he said.

Gardner said the emergency power system at the prison is adequate, despite the trouble experienced during the storm. He described the generator failures as minimal.

The prison's cellblocks have electronic locking mechanisms, but the cells still can be operated through a manual override system in the event of a power failure, he said.

The disturbance Tuesday night occurred in the same cellblock, but a separate wing, where fire erupted last week in a cell in what prison officials said was an attempt by unidentified prisoners to intimidate a fellow inmate, the warden said.

Minor earthquake strikes Yellowstone National Park

JACKSON, Wyo. (UPI) — A small quake shook the Yellowstone National Park area Wednesday, the National Earthquake Information Center in Denver said.

No damage or injuries were reported.

Officials reported the quake occurred at 1:04 p.m. The epicenter of the tremor was about 10 miles southwest of Jackson.

U.S. Geological Survey scientists in Washington, D.C., said the quake measured 3.5 on the Richter scale and was felt in Jackson and nearby Yellowstone Park.

Officials had predicted tremors would continue for sometime in the area following an earthquake Friday.

Questions slow Utah parol panel

SALT LAKE CITY (UPI) — The Utah Attorney General's Office says members of the Board of Pardons cannot hold other government jobs, but the point is moot because a new law has made the positions full-time jobs.

The pressing problem now is whether attorneys on the board can practice law on the side, said Stephen Love, deputy director for field operations in the State Division of Corrections.

Love asked for an attorney general's opinion last year concerning board members who also work in government. But since then, the Utah Legislature revamped the board and changed members status from part-time to full-time.

The opinion issued Wednesday by Assistant Attorney General Brent Burnett said members of the board may not work in federal, state, city or county government. "But that doesn't do us any good now," Love said. "None of the members work in government because the Board of Pardons is their full-time job," Love said. "When we asked the question, we had part-time members who also worked in government and we needed to know what to do about them. The Legislature has made the issue a dead one.

"What we need to know now and unfortunately did not include in our request for an attorney general's opinion is whether attorneys on the board can still practice law," Love said.

The newest member on the board is recently-appointed Dennis Fewkes, a lawyer. Another member, Victoria Palacios, is also a lawyer. Chairman Gary Webster is a sociologist.

Fight ends in shooting

POST FALLS (UPI) — Ronald Gismondi, 29, Post Falls, Idaho, was shot to death early Wednesday after apparently being involved in an argument with his live in girlfriend.

Kootenai County Sheriff's officers identified the victim as Ronald Gismondi.

Officers said Gismondi's girlfriend, JoAnn Reagan, 20, apparently fired the fatal shot.

She was being held in protective custody Wednesday.

One official said the woman told officers Gismondi had abused and threatened her prior to the shooting.

No shots, no school

SPOKANE (UPI) — About 100 Rogers High School students were sent home from school Tuesday because they had not yet gotten their measles shots.

All students must have shots or records of innoculations before they can be admitted to classes.

The Spokane County Health District decided to enforce the law because of a recent outbreak of hard measles in the city.

Officials said those immunized before they were 12 months olds and before 1968 should make arrangements to be reimmunized.

Defunct mine sold in scam

BOISE (UPI) — A magistrate has issued arrest warrants for two men on 60 felony charges accusing them of violating securities laws by allegedly enticing people in three states to invest in a failed Oregon gold-mining operation.

The Ada County prosecutor's office said Wednesday sheriff's deputies were looking for Stanley C. Allen and Robert W. Geier, described as chief partners in Mine Management — a venture in which authorities said investors lost more than $200,000.

The defendants lived in Boise when the alleged infractions were committed in late 1981 and early 1982, but their whereabouts were unknown when the warrants were issued Tuesday by Fourth District Magistrate Wayne Willis, prosecutors said.

Deputy Prosecutor Rob Chastain said about 20 people in Idaho, Washington and California lost money they invested in the Cave Junction Mine in southern Oregon.

Lee Iacocca, Chrysler Corp. chairman, waves to assembly line workers after driving out first minivan at plant in Canada

Chrysler rolls out minivans

By MICHELINE MAYNARD
United Press International

WINDSOR, Ontario — Chrysler's new front-wheel drive minivan made its debut Wednesday.

Chairman Lee Iacocca predicted the vehicle will be to the 1980s what his brainchild, the Ford Mustang, was to the 1960s.

Iacocca drove a Plymouth Voyager minivan off the assembly line at the company's renovated Windsor Assembly Plant. An automatic garage door opened to reveal the vehicle, which is touted as "garageable."

The chairman emerged from the minivan grinning and waving to a crowd of several thousand hourly workers at the plant, but five Chrysler executives were stuck momentarily when the vehicle's sliding door would not open.

Chrysler spent $400 million out of the total $660 million minivan budget to renovate the plant. Production began Wednesday, but officials said it likely will halt today if a strike by Chrysler workers at the Twinsburg, Ohio, stamping plant continues.

The Voyager and Dodge Caravan wagons and a third vehicle, the Mini Ram Van, will go on sale in January. Each is smaller than a standard-size van and larger than a station wagon. They have the space of those vehicles but are designed to handle like an automobile.

Minivans are expected to be the next trend in the auto industry. The Japanese automaker Toyota already has a minivan on the market. General Motors Corp. will introduce its version in 1985 and Ford Motor Co. in 1986.

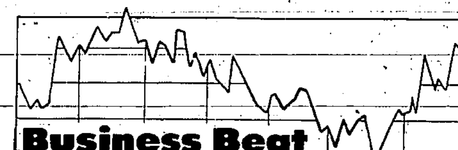

"It is going to make automotive history," Iacocca said of the minivan. "I predict the Voyager and Caravan will be to the 1980s what the Mustang was to the 1960s — vehicles that create extraordinary excitement and buyer interest and force other manufacturers to come up with copycat versions."

Iacocca's reputation was built on the Mustang, which was developed during his years as a Ford executive.

Ironically, the ceremony in Windsor took place on Iacocca's fifth anniversary with Chrysler. He joined the company in 1978 after Henry Ford II fired him as president of Ford.

Iacocca said the automaker has already received 30,000 orders for the minivans. The Mini Ram Van will have a base price of $7,600 to $7,800. The Voyager and Caravan versions will start at about $8,500.

Estimated fuel economy for the vehicles is 26 miles per gallon in city driving, 37 mpg in highway driving.

Business Beat

Silver looks like a bargain

WALLACE (UPI) — Investors looking for a bargain should check the recently depressed silver market, a mining consultant says.

"If you like it, you might as well buy it on a dip," said Philip Lindstrom, Wallace, a retired mining engineer who supervises investor relations for Hecla Mining Co.

The Handy and Harman exchange on Wednesday pegged the price of silver at $8.75 per ounce, down from a high of $12.60 on Aug. 20.

But Lindstrom said he wouldn't stake his life savings on the volatile silver market. "Don't spend all of your money at once," he said. "It (the price) might dip even more."

With the price of gold at $383 and the ratio between the two metals at about 44-1, silver is an especially attractive investment, he said.

Salinity control given nod

WASHINGTON (UPI) — A House subcommittee Wednesday approved a bill to create a coordinated Department of Agriculture salinity control program for the seven-state Colorado River Basin.

The bill, sponsored by Rep. Kika de la Garza, D-Texas, was approved by the House Conservation, Credit and Rural Subcommittee. It now moves to the full House Agriculture Committee for consideration. The measure has the support of the Agriculture Department.

De la Garza said the program could ward off increasing damage from salinity that already is causing millions of dollars annually to agriculture and non-agricultural water users in the Lower Colorado Basin states of Nevada, California and Arizona.

September home sales leap

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sales of new houses jumped 13.7 percent in September, the Commerce Department said Wednesday, an unexpected burst of enthusiasm by buyers despite high mortgage interest rates and record high prices.

The average price of a new house jumped $7,500 to a record $98,700 during the month, the department said.

September's annual rate of sales was 632,000 units, the highest level since June and the sixth month out of nine this year to show an improvement, which in September was the strongest surge in a year.

Factory orders up slightly

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Factory orders climbed 1.5 percent in September despite setbacks for machinery, metals and the auto industry, the Commerce Department said Wednesday.

It was the eighth overall improvement in the last 10 months, largely fueled by consumer purchases of nondurable items from food to clothing.

The increase in new orders in September should help keep factory production and employment growing in the weeks and months ahead.

Stocks strong despite worries

NEW YORK (UPI) — Trying to break out of a long slump, the stock market scored its best gain in three weeks Wednesday despite investor uncertainties about interest rates.

Banking and transportation issues were pacesetters in the busy session that saw some technology issues also rebound from recent drubbings.

The Dow Jones industrial average, a 4.07 winner Tuesday, jumped 8.03 to 1,237.30, the best gain since it rose 12.50 on Oct. 10. It operated at a 1.12 point deficit since IBM and California Standard traded minus their dividends.

The Dow Jones transportation average rose 4.76 to 584.08 and the Dow utility average, which hit a 14-year high Monday, jumped 0.39 at 140.61.

The New York Stock Exchange index gained 0.69 to 95.02 and the price of an average share increased 28 cents. Standard & Poor's 500-stock index rose 1.20 to 164.84. Advances topped declines 1,065-547 among the 1,988 issues traded.

The Big Board volume of 95,210,000 shares, up from the 84,460,000 traded Tuesday, was the heaviest since 107.78 million changed hands Oct. 19.

Barry Berlin of Shearson-American Express thinks "we have seen the worst of the summer-fall pullback. The technology stocks have been put through the wringer and they are bouncing back."

Berlin said the "economy is quite positive and that's helping the market."

Some investors still were disturbed the Senate has failed to raise the nation's debt ceiling, which forced the Treasury to postpone its quarterly refunding program.

Composite volume of NYSE issues listed on all U.S. exchanges and over the counter totaled 113,516,660 shares compared with 102,554,330 Tuesday.

The American Stock Exchange index gained 2.15 to 214.20 and the price of an average share rose 15 cents. Advances topped declines 329-261.

Sylvia Porter

Third of a series

In the overwhelming flood of information about Individual Retirement Accounts (IRAs), you may be overlooking a highly significant point:

It may be more advantageous for an older executive to contribute to an IRA than for a young employee just starting out. Unless you are 59½ years of age or older, an IRA is a one-way street.

You contribute deductible dollars to the IRA, but you cannot withdraw anything without incurring a 10 percent penalty until you are 59½. To some young executives, the withdrawal penalty is enough to make them hesitate about setting up an IRA. But if you are approaching or already have reached 59½, the same rule opens up an especially attractive tax shelter.

The IRA is a tax-sheltered savings plan. After 59½, like anyone else, you can deduct what you contribute (up to $2,000) and defer the tax on what the plan earns. Unlike others, though, you can withdraw what you have contributed whenever you wish — without penalty.

One catch: You can make IRA contributions only if you have earned income; pension income or interest or other investment income won't support an IRA deduction. So if you retire at 65, you no longer can make deductible contributions, but you still can make penalty-free withdrawals.

Moral: It's never too late — or almost never. You can't contribute to an IRA if you're older than 70½. But below that age, you can contribute every year you have earned income. And if you are 59½ or older, you can both contribute and withdraw without paying a penalty.

IRS trustees — banks, brokerage firms, insurance companies, for example — sometimes charge a fee for their professional money management services. But there is a new ruling.

And if the Internal Revenue Service applies this newly released private ruling to all IRAs, the separate payment of these fees will be deductible as an expense for the production of income.

In addition to asking about the deductibility of fees, the taxpayer in the ruling wanted to know if the payment of trustee's fees is a contribution for purposes of the excess contribution penalty.

And is it a reduction of the annual IRA contribution ($2,000 or $2,250 if the taxpayer has a spouse who doesn't work outside the home)? Prentice-Hall's valuable answer:

The payment of the fees is not considered an IRA contribution for any purpose if the fees are separately billed and paid by the account owner. The owner can contribute the full $2,000 in addition to paying the deductible fee (Letter Ruling 8329049).

There is no minimum age requirement for setting up an IRA, Eli Warach, editor-in-chief and divisional vice president of Prentice-Hall, emphasizes. If your teen-age child has earnings from a job, he or she can contribute the earnings up to $2,000 to an IRA.

Once the contributions are made, though, they are usually locked away until the child reaches age 59½. So your child may not be too enthusiastic about contributing earnings to an IRA. What to do?

Contribute for your child or children. Make cash gifts to your children and then they put the money into IRAs. It's not necessary that the children's actual earnings be contributed. What is important is that the amount contributed (the gifts from you) not exceed the amount that is earned. As long as this is so, everybody wins.

• Your child keeps his/her earnings to buy a car, save for college, whatever. He or she has an early start on a tax-sheltered fund.

And the family tax bill is cut. The general rule is that your child owes federal income tax if he or she earns more than $3,300 a year.

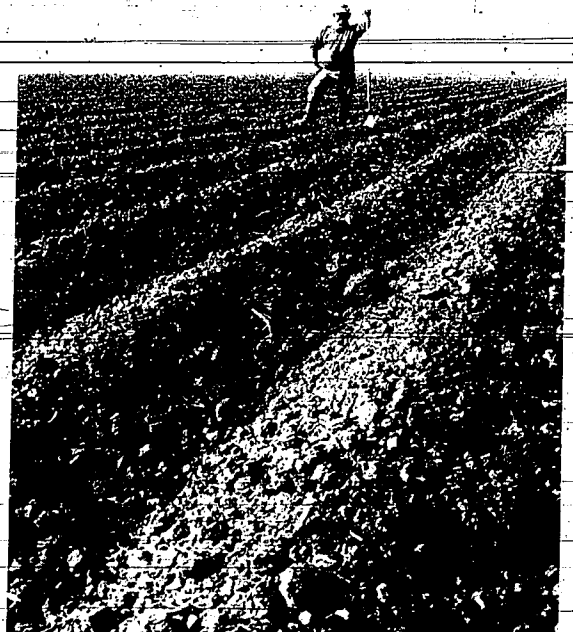

But every dollar the child gets from you that is put into an IRA is deductible. So he or she can now earn as much as $5,300 ($3,300 plus $2,000 IRA contribution) and not pay one penny in taxes!

No tax shelter in history has ever been devised for average Americans that even challenges the IRS for equity, potential profit, excellence. Don't miss it; don't misuse it. It's great!

Next: Save on taxes by pulling deductions and credits into '83.

Sylvia Porter writes on financial matters for Universal Press Syndicate.

"After the harvest, I start thinking about next year. I plan it all out in my head. I guess my dream is to keep the farm running right."

The harvest is in and Fall is here. Before Winter comes upon us, it's time to put things in order for next year. At Idaho First, we're ready, as always, to help make your dreams come true. Whether it's more land, new equipment, stock, seed or fertilizer, we have an agricultural loan just right for you.

Why Idaho First? For a hundred and sixteen years, we've been helping farmers, dairymen, and ranchers succeed in business. We know from long experience what it takes to help you plan for the future, and to satisfy the demands of the present.

So drop by your local Idaho First bank, and tell us about your plans and dreams for next year.

Grain futures

CHICAGO (UPI) — Wheat was mostly higher, corn and oats higher and soybeans substantially higher at the close Wednesday on the Chicago Board of Trade.

Wheat was up 2½ to off 2¼ cents, corn up 3¼ to 4½, oats up 1½ to 2½, and soybeans up 7½ to 20½.

The markets closed on a firm note and generally near the day's highs.

There was good buying interest throughout the session along with good volume. Some analysts described it as the most active buying they had seen in several days.

The outside markets were higher which provided underlying support for soybeans and the grains.

Cash merchandisers reported light country movement during the session in response to the higher prices.

Corn prices were bolstered by the Agriculture Department's announcement that the release status for corn in the 1982 reserve had ended.

Gains in the wheat pit were limited on news the Soviet Union and China may be ready to purchase wheat from France.

Building in September maintains strong level

BOISE — New construction activity in Idaho during September maintained the relatively strong levels of the previous two months.

So states the Idaho Construction Report of First Security Bank, which is based on authorized building permits issued at 54 major locations around the state.

Total construction value during September was $28.21 million, up 18.5 percent over the same month in 1982.

New residential construction in the month amounted to $16.34 million, an increase of 23.4 percent. Non-residential construction, valued at $3.47 million, dropped 24.2 percent. Alterations and repairs were valued at $8.39 million, an increase of 40.3 percent.

In September, 382 new dwellings were started, an increase of 22.4 percent over the same month a year earlier.

For the first nine months of 1983, Idaho construction was valued at $294.48 million, an increase of 32.7 percent over the same period in 1982.

Residential construction in that period totaled $138.85 million, up 84.1 percent. Non-residential construction, valued at $85.15 million, was up .6 percent. Alterations and repairs were up 13.8 percent at $70.47 million.

For the nine months, there were 3,121 new dwelling units started in Idaho. That is an 81.3 percent increase over the same period in 1982.

Contracting declines 17% across Idaho

NEW YORK — Construction contracting in Idaho declined 17 percent during September, compared to the same month in 1982.

But for the first nine months of 1983, Idaho contracting rose 16 percent from levels of the same period a year earlier.

Those are the findings of the F.W. Dodge Division of McGraw-Hill Information Systems Co.

George A. Christie, vice president and chief economist, said total construction contracting in Idaho during September amounted to $48.71 million, down 17 percent from $58.42 million in the same month in 1982.

Non-residential contracts totaled $9.96 million, down 64 percent from $27.67 million in 1982. Residential contracting, at $20.46 million, was up 3 percent from $19.94 million in 1982. Non-building contracts of $18.28 million were up 69 percent from $10.80 million a year earlier.

Total construction contracting in Idaho for the first nine months of 1983 amounted to $462.64 million, up 16 percent from $398.67 million in the same period in 1982.

Non-residential contracts for that period totaled $115.03 million, off 6 percent from $122.75 million in 1982. Residential contracting, at $245.73 million, was up 95 percent from $125.97 million a year earlier. Non-building contracts amounted to $101.87 million, down 32 percent from $149.94 million a year earlier.

Valley Life

Geraldine Valliere, 87, with photo when she was lead performer in unusual four-piano act

Vaudeville star reminisces

FREMONT, Mich. (UPI) — Geraldine Valliere's scrapbooks and diaries are full of memories of high times, the fame and thrills that came with a career in vaudeville.

The 87-year-old pianist was once the lead performer in an unusual all-woman four-piano act known as "Jerry and the Baby Grands." She worked with Milton Berle, Burns and Allen, Bob Hope, Bing Crosby -- everyone who was anyone back then.

But what time gave, time took away.

Vaudeville died out and, after accompanying Major Bowes' traveling amateur show for a few years, Miss Valliere returned to this small western Michigan town to care for her mother.

"It's been a pretty lonely life after the excitement of traveling and meeting people in show business," she admits. "It was tough at first. All I know is music ... I can't even cook yet."

Her rise to vaudeville headliner was the stuff of which movies were made.

A small town music teacher, the daughter of a grocer, gets a job in Duluth, Minn., and works in her spare time as a theater pianist. She gains some local fame in 1919 by heading three other pianists in a piano quartet and, after appearing in Chicago, is booked for New York.

From there, the sky's the limit. Long runs at the nation's top theaters as Jerry and the Baby Grands, the piano quartet that came complete with a troupe of eight dancers and 6½ tons of equipment.

She even headlined a 13-country around-the-world tour that lasted from August 1929 to November 1930. Her quartet played the top halls in England, France, Germany, Australia and South Africa.

But the demand for a piano quartet that traveled with 13,000 pounds of gear in tow faded along with vaudeville.

After a couple of years with Major Bowes, she returned to Duluth — where a small confectioner had named a candy bar, the "Jerry Bar," after her — and then retired to Fremont to care for her mother.

"My mother, right up until her last moment in life, said 'nobody ever had a daugher like you,'" she says. "I came home in 1941 to care for her after my father died ... and she passed away at 103."

"I never married, I never had time," she says, a bit wistfully. "Oh, I had my chances. My manager waited for me for 42 years ... he died in Florida."

Memories and memorabilia keep Miss Valliere company in the small apartment she calls home.

The walls are lined with photos of her act; four platinum blonde women seated behind huge pianos with dancers strutting on top.

On one wall is a map marked with the route and performance dates of her around-the-world tour. A similarly charted globe sits atop a small cabinet jammed to overflowing with scrapbooks, publicity photos and handbills.

"I still hear from Milton Berle," she says. "I was his guest at the Lowell Showboat a few years ago.

"George Burns was one of my best friends ... George and Gracie were on the same show with me 30 some weeks one season. Kate Smith, Bob Hope, I worked with them all."

When she shows remorse, it is not over a lost career but bitterness toward the rigors of age.

"I don't play the piano any more," she says, rubbing her hands. "It's arthritis. I haven't played for two or three years. I just can't play well enough to suit myself — I always played fancy, not plain."

And, for a town like Fremont, she'll always be remembered as one who led a pretty fancy life.

Idaho PTA meet opens

BOISE — The Idaho PTA convention will be held in the Holiday Inn at Boise today through Saturday.

Board meetings are scheduled Thursday morning with the general session for delegates to open at 1:20 p.m. PTA leadership workshops will be held this afternoon.

Friday's schedule includes an address by Claudia Johnson, state president, followed by the legislative platform presentation. Issues to be discussed will include school funding, sales tax, local option tax, merit pay, equity in professional compensation and consolidation.

Workshops Friday afternoon will be on "Special Education for Special Children" by Dr. John Beltis of BSU; "Improving Literacy through Reading and Writing," Dr. George Hess of BSU; "Self-Concepts" by Dr. Edmundson from BSU and "Families in Training," by an Arizona State University representative.

The awards banquet will be held Friday night with a buffet breakfast Saturday morning. Final workshops to be led by teachers and Dr. Al Luke of the Idaho Department of Education are scheduled Saturday morning. The convention will close Saturday noon, according to Mary Lynne Bristol, district 4 president.

Candy striper wants dollar to go to some worthy cause

Abigail VanBuren
Dear Abby

DEAR ABBY: I am a 13-year-old girl working as a "candy striper" (volunteer) at a home for the aging in Cleveland. During my lunchtime an elderly lady came up to me and asked if I would walk her to the medical building next door to buy a pair of sunglasses.

I walked her over there and she tried to give me a dollar. I told her I couldn't accept it, and besides, it was such a beautiful day I really enjoyed the walk. She got very mad and threatened not to go back with me if I didn't take the dollar. She said, "Just take it, and don't tell anyone!" Then she stuck it in my pocket.

Abby, I don't know what to do with this money. I'd feel so guilty if I spent it. I feel like throwing it out, but there are people who could use it. I know it isn't much, but I'm sending it to you. Will you please send it to a worthy cause?

— M.K.

DEAR M.K.: You are to be commended for (a) not wanting to keep the money and (b) asking that it go to a worthy cause.

I am sending your dollar to the United Way in Cleveland. It supports 175 separate agencies — among which are the American Cancer Society, the Heart Association, Boy Scouts, Girl Scouts, help for the hearing-impaired and the visually handicapped, crippled children, etc.

You say a dollar isn't much, but every dollar counts. If everyone who reads this sent a dollar to his or her own United Way, millions of disabled, sick, poor and elderly people would be better served.

DEAR ABBY: "Billy" and I dated for five years before we got married two months ago. We live in my house. I have a good job and it pays well.

The problem? Billy does not have a job, and he doesn't seem to care if he gets one or not. He never goes job hunting — he just does odd jobs whenever he feels like it, which is not very often.

I have tried to impress on him the importance of getting a steady job because I don't want to go on supporting us forever.

My parents will help us out if we need money, but it's not their place to support Billy and me. It's our place to support ourselves. Your advice would be greatly appreciated.

— LOSING PATIENCE IN S.C.

DEAR LOSING: Give Billy an ultimatum. Let him know that if he does not seriously seek employment until he comes up with something, the honeymoon is over! And give him a time limit — unless you want to carry this freeloader indefinitely.

DEAR ABBY: Thank you for your fine column on fire prevention during Fire Prevention Week.

You wrote: "The phone number of your fire department should be taped to every telephone." An excellent idea, but you should have added, "along with your address."

A sitter or guest in your home may not know your address. Also, people sometimes panic when calling the fire department and "forget" their own address.

Rural women suffer stress

PORTLAND, Ore. (UPI) — Rural women — stalwarts of the American family, pillars of strength, decency and contentedness — might not be as strong and happy as many people believe.

A pilot study by an associate professor at the Oregon Health Sciences Center School of Nursing suggests that wives and mothers who live in the seemingly tranquil countryside suffer inner turmoil way out of proportion to the rest of society.

Florence Hardesty, who interviewed 26 Marion County women for her study, said the results might not be so unexpected.

"Rural areas in general have more mental illness than urban areas," she said. "There is also more mental illness among women. It seemed the combined variables of being rural and being women would indicate this was a vulnerable population."

Her sample included women who volunteered through a local agriculture extension service and some recommended by school principals. Some worked with their husbands on farms, one was a stained glass artist, a few worked at home. About half of the women grew up in cities and later moved to the country. The mean age was 45, with a range from 24 to 80.

They were educated and their families had good incomes — "charming, bright, nice people."

However, only 15 scored in the healthy range on a stress measurement. Ten were in the range "where there was a lot of stress; they might be borderline," Mrs. Hardesty said. "One was very stressed."

Most research on rural residents has been in the South, "where they are poorer and blacker and not as educated, but 75 percent turned out to be healthy," she said. "Only 57 percent of the nice, bright, personable Oregon women turned out to be healthy."

Mrs. Hardesty acknowledges her study was not done according to the best sampling techniques, "but even with its limitations, it is still surprising. You would think the limits would produce more healthy people than less."

"When you talked to them, they all looked great, but there was a lot going on," she said. "They weren't sick, but some of them were struggling."

She rated their average happiness at seven on a scale of one to 10.

"All thought they were happy," she said, "but on the stress scale, they were showing evidence of stress."

"Most of the problems they reported had to do with other people — husbands, children," Mrs. Hardesty said. "Animals were almost as much hassle as kids. Hassles with farm animals, not pets. 'The steers broke loose and terrorized the kids in the school yard.' 'The cow is having a calf and can't get the vet to come.' Here was a poor woman raised in the city trying to deliver a calf."

Access to the telephone and a car were "very important to their well-being," she said. "It made all the difference in the world. Without the car, things were really rough."

She hopes to expand her study to other areas of the country, especially boom areas.

Mrs. Hardesty, who was raised in rural Pennsylvania and now lives in the country with her husband, said she is familiar with the hollowness of the stereotype of rural life.

"When I heard my colleagues talk about support systems — the closeness, the romantic 'little house on the prairie,' it disturbed me," she said. "In my home community, before you got into that support system, you had to be there two generations. And people never forgot if you transgressed."

She said opportunities in rural areas are less, and there is "a lot of depression among both men and women. Suicide rates among older farmers are high. They won't go talk to somebody; they just take a shotgun, go out to a field and kill themselves.

"I really feel you can be very lonely no matter how beautiful the leaves are. You can be troubled and not have anybody to talk to."

In Western states like Oregon, which had a 31 percent increase in the rural population from 1970 to 1980, rural communities are not even as tightly knit as other areas of the country, she said.

"Maybe you know people on the next farm down the road, but you don't know many and don't talk to them much," she said. "If your husband beats you, there's nowhere to go. Alcoholism can be hidden for a long time before anyone notices."

In her study, the women who had moved to the country from urban areas experienced more stress than women raised in rural areas, possibly because they were newer to the area.

She said part of the solution is more health programs. Another part is a recognition by troubled women that they are not alone, she said.

Family members can help she said, ' understanding that it isn't all so easy, being "illn"

Mrs. Kalbfleisch came to the Buhl area as a child, graduated from the Buhl High School in 1930 and attended Northwest Nazarene College, Nampa, until the death of her mother, when she left school to keep house for her father. Kalbfleisch is a native of the Filer area. The couple farmed west of Filer until they retired in 1979 when they moved to Nampa.

The event will be hosted by their children, Dr. Kenneth Kalbfleisch of Nampa, and Roger Kalbfleisch of Filer, and their 10 grandchildren.

LEGAL NOTICE

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Wednesday, the 15th day of February, 1984, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock a.m., of said day, at the east front door of the Twin Falls County Courthouse, Twin Falls, Idaho, TITLEFACT, INC., an Idaho corporation as trustee, will sell at public auction to the highest bidder for cash, in lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real property, situate in the City of Twin Falls, County of Twin Falls, State of Idaho, described as follows:

Lot Three (3), Block Two (2), NEW SCHOOL ADDITION, according to the official plat thereof, recorded in Book 1 of Plats, page 103, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligation secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust executed by JOHNNY M. URRUTIA and DEBORAH URRUTIA, husband and wife, as Grantors, to TITLEFACT, INC., an Idaho corporation, as Trustee, and the TWIN FALLS BANK & TRUST COMPANY as Beneficiary, dated October 7, 1977, recorded October 7, 1977, in Book 212 of Mortgages at page 1974, as instrument number 723575, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, which Deed of Trust and obligation secured thereunder, were assumed by GARY G. TURREL and JUNE A. TURREL, husband and wife, under an Assumption Agreement dated February 1, 1979, recorded October 3, 1983, as instrument number 848068, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho; GARY G. TURRELL and JUNE A. TURRELL, husband and wife, having sold said property to JAMES VOLK, under a Note and Deed of Trust dated January 21, 1980, which Deed of Trust was recorded January 31, 1980, as instrument number 776216, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, JAMES VOLK having conveyed said property to BIG WOOD REALTY, INC., under a Warranty Deed dated August 1, 1980, recorded October 20, 1980, as instrument number 791346, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, BIG WOOD REALTY, INC., having sold said property to JAMES A. BOYER and MILDRED E. BOYER, husband and wife, under a Note and Deed of Trust dated October 20, 1980, recorded October 20, 1980, as instrument number 791348, records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, BIG WOOD REALTY, INC., as Beneficiary, having made a Partial Assignment to the TWIN FALLS CLINIC AND HOSPITAL BUILDING CORPORATION dated June 1, 1981, recorded June 18, 1981, as instrument number 804848, records of Twin Falls County.

The default for which this sale is to be made is that the successors in interest of the Grantors referred to above have failed to pay the installments due under the terms of said Deed of Trust and promissory Note secured thereby as follows:

$240.01 Due August 1, 1983

$240.01 Due September 1, 1983

$240.01 Due October 1, 1983

and late charges in the amount of $48.00 together with the 1982 real property taxes which are delinquent in the amount of $422.04 plus penalty and interest, and private mortgage insurance in the sum of $21.00.

The principal balance owed as of this date on the obligation secured by said Deed of Trust is TWENTY SIX THOUSAND, NINE HUNDRED AND 20/100 DOLLARS ($26,900.20), with interest at the rate of nine and one-quarter percent (9¼%) per annum from and after July 1, 1983, together with accrued and accruing late charges and any and all other fees and costs associated with this foreclosure proceeding.

DATED this 6th day of October, 1983.

NOTICE OF IRRIGATION DISTRICT TAXES DUE

In compliance with Title 43 Section 707 of the Idaho Code, as amended, each property owner owning land within the boundaries of the King Hill Irrigation District, or person or institution having interest therein, is hereby notified that the 1983 assessments of the District are now due and payable. You are also notified that payments can be properly received only upon your identification of the land that you own. Each of you is hereby notified that, in compliance with the Idaho Code, payments for the first half of these taxes must be made on or before the 20th day of December, 1983; that, from that date to the 15th day of January 1984, the books will be closed for the acceptance of payment of the 1983 irrigation district taxes and that thereafter a 2% penalty will have been added to the amount of the first half and interest will accrue at the rate of 1% per month, from the 1st day of January 1984 to the date payment has been received by the District. You are hereby cautioned that Title 43-707 of the Idaho Code stipulates the medium by which payment is acceptable; that personal drafts upon a bank are acceptable only upon acceptance of liability therefore by the District Treasurer; that in the event past taxes of the District are delinquent upon your land, such drafts will be accepted only at the Treasurer's discretion and the date of payment to the District is the date payment is surrendered to the District by the Treasurer after satisfactory clearance has been made.

Each of you is also hereby notified that the final payment date, without penalty and interest being added, for the second half of the 1983 irrigation district taxes is the 20th day of June 1984. Thereafter the books will again be closed for payment of the 1983 tax, liens will be placed of record against the land; all fees required by law will be added and payment of these will be required before any release of lien will be forwarded to the office of the County Recorder. Interest chargeable by law against both halves accrues from the first day of January 1984.

Each of you is also herewith notified that location of the office of the District Treasurer, at which payments can be made, is P.O. Box 428, King Hill, Idaho 83633; and that opening hours are from 1:00 P.M. to 5:00 P.M. of each day, Monday through Friday of each week, excepting holidays. Each of you is also hereby notified that if you are the owner or the interested party in title to land located within the boundaries of the King Hill Irrigation District, this notice is full and adequate notice, under the provision of law, of the obligation to pay the assessments of the District for the year 1983.

NOTICE OF TRUSTEE'S SALE

On Tuesday, the 28th day of February, 1984, at the hour of 10:00 o'clock A.M., of said day, at the office of TitleFact, Inc., 153 Fourth Avenue North, Twin Falls, Idaho, 83301, Lawyers Title Company of Idaho will sell, to the highest bidder for cash, lawful money of the United States, all payable at the time of sale, the following described real estate, situated as follows, to-wit:

Lot 12 in Block 8 of Bickel Addition, Twin Falls County, Idaho, according to the Plat thereof recorded in Volume 3 of Plats, Page 19, records of said County.

Said sale will be made without covenant or warranty regarding title, possession, or encumbrances, to satisfy the obligations secured by and pursuant to the power of sale conferred in the Deed of Trust, dated the 15th day of March, 1979, by James D. Clawson and Sandra Clawson, husband and wife as Grantor to Lawyers Title Company of Idaho, a Joint Venture as Successor Trustee, for the benefit and security of Idaho Housing Agency, assignee of United First Federal Savings and Loan Association, Beneficiary, recorded on the 26th day of March, 1979, in Official Records of Twin Falls County, Idaho, Recorder's Instrument No. 755526.

The Grantors named herein are listed to comply with Section 45-1506 (4) (a) of the Idaho Code. No representation is made whether or not they are currently responsible for the obligation listed herein.

Foreclosure is being effected because of default in the payment of the obligation due and owing from the Grantor to Beneficiary and evidenced by a Promissory Note, which said obligation is secured by the said Deed of Trust; said default consisting of: Failure to pay when due regular monthly installments of $242.70 each for October 1, 1982 through February 1983 and regular monthly installments of $248.74 each for March 1, 1983 and every month thereafter.

By reason of said default, the Beneficiary has exercised its option in the Deed of Trust to declare the entire indebtedness and accrued interest, late charges, attorney's fees, trustee's fees, and other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure to be due and payable. The principal balance owing as of this date is $28,238.68 plus accrued interest at the rate of 7.50% per annum from September 1, 1982 plus late charges of $8.18 per month from October 1982, attorney's fees, trustee's fee, and any other costs or expenses associated with this foreclosure as provided by the Deed of Trust, the Promissory Note or Idaho Law.

SAMPLE BALLOT

CITY OF TWIN FALLS, STATE OF IDAHO, GENERAL MUNICIPAL ELECTION DATE NOV. 8, 1983
AND SPECIAL GENERAL OBLIGATION BOND ELECTION

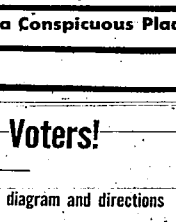

The Voter Moving the Red Operating Lever to the Right.

Each candidate's voting lever is located just above the name; a voting lever must be turned down over the name of the candidate for whom you wish to vote. Leave voting lever down.

The machine is so arranged that you can turn down only the proper number of voting levers for each office.

No votes are registered until the curtain lever is moved to open the curtain, and so you can make as many changes as you desire while the curtain lever is at the right side.

No one will know how you have voted because the movement of the curtain lever returns the voted voting levers to the unvoted position before the curtain begins to open.

The Curtain Closed, Voter Inside Voting

DIRECTIONS for VOTING

1. Move the Red Operating Lever to the Right.
2. Turn down a Voting Pointer over the name of each candidate you wish to vote for. LEAVE THE POINTERS DOWN.
3. To vote for PERSONS NOT NOMINATED, lift slot covers at top of machine above positions and WRITE IN NAMES.
4. Move the Red Operating Lever to the Left.

Election Officer: Post in a Conspicuous Place.

Attention, Voters!

Familiarize yourself with this diagram and directions for operating the voting machine. It will assist you in voting and save time on election day.

QUESTION: Shall the City of Twin Falls, Idaho, issue and sell its general obligation public recreation bonds to the amount of $500,000, payable from ad valorem taxes for the purpose of providing for the purchase, improvement and equipment of lands and buildings thereon for public recreation facilities, said public recreation facilities to include a swimming pool complex, parking facilities and access roads, as more fully provided in Ordinance No. 2083 adopted October 3, 1983?

The total existing indebtedness, including interest accrued as of November 1, 1983, of the City of Twin Falls is $351,808.33. The interest rate anticipated on the proposed general obligation bonds is 9.0%. The range of anticipated rates is from 8.0% to 10.5%. The total amount to be repaid over the life of the proposed general obligation bonds, based on the anticipated interest rate is $860,000.

SAMPLE BALLOT

The Voter Moving the Red Operating Lever to the Right

The Curtain Closed. Voter Inside Voting

Each candidate's voting lever is located just above the name. A voting lever must be turned down over the name of the candidate for whom you wish to vote. Leave voting lever down.

The machine is so arranged that you can turn down only the proper number of voting levers for each office.

No votes are registered until the curtain lever is moved to open the curtain, and so you can make as many changes as you desire while the curtain lever is at the right side.

No one will know how you have voted because the movement of the curtain lever returns the voted voting levers to the unvoted position before the curtain begins to open.

DIRECTIONS for VOTING

1. Move the Red Operating Lever to the Right.
2. Turn down a Voting Pointer over the name of each candidate you wish to vote for. LEAVE THE POINTERS DOWN.
3. To vote for PERSONS NOT NOMINATED, lift slot covers at top of machine above positions and WRITE IN NAMES.
4. Move the Red Operating Lever to the Left.

Attention, Voters!

Familiarize yourself with this diagram and directions for operating the voting machine. It will assist you in voting and save time on election day.

Election Officer: Post in a Conspicuous Place.

THE ACES® BOBBY WOLFF

"Set me a task in which I can put something of my very self, and it is a task no longer; it is joy; it is art." — Bliss Carman

It takes perfect timing and an artful defense to beat today's no-trump game. The clues are there for any East to see; successful execution may be quite another story.

East took West's heart nine with his 10 and when South ducked, East shifted to the diamond 10. South's jack went to West's queen and West led another heart to East's jack. South was forced to duck again. (Had South taken the second heart, East would have been able to run his hearts when, West won his piece of spades.) East led another diamond and South was finished. Regardless of what he did, the defenders would score two hearts, two diamonds and a spade for down one.

How could East be sure his defense would work? He couldn't. However, dummy's black suits and his own lack of entry made a heart continuation a poor choice, so the only suit left was diamonds.

When one line of defense is sure to fail, one must seek another that has some chance to win.

Bruins seek .500 plateau in finale

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

TWIN FALLS — A chance for a .500 season and a rare afternoon game will wind up the Twin Falls football season Saturday.

Coach Bill Jones' Bruins will entertain the Skyline Grizzlies at 1:30 p.m. Saturday at Bruin Stadium. The only other regular season game for a Magic Valley team comes Friday night when the Minico Spartans will host the Idaho Falls Tigers.

These playoffs are pretty well set. Idaho Falls takes the long trip to Coeur d'Alene for an afternoon game Nov. 12. The winner of that one advances to Boise on Nov. 19 to take on top-rated Meridian. Caldwell will host the other A-1 opener, meeting the metropolitan runner-up, probably Capital, Nov. 11 at 7 p.m., That winner goes to Pocatello to play the Highland Rams Nov. 19.

Twin Falls currently is sitting at 4-5 and this is a chance for the Bruins to have two consecutive at-least break even seasons since 1970 and 1971, when they went 6-4 and 5-5.

"In the last two weeks we have played decent football," said Jones. "Eliminate the turnovers and the mental lapses in our defensive secondary and we could have won the last two — although I know that's saying quite a bit. But if we play as well Saturday, we will win.

"People reading the paper will see that Skyline has won only one game. But they'd better understand that Skyline is not a bad team," he continued. "They have been doing the same things we have — putting the ball on the ground, getting mixed up at the wrong time in our pass coverage and losing games that they could well have won."

It could well be a game that those with an aversion to seeing the ball in the air would relish.

Gem State Conference statistics show that Skyline threw just 82 passes in its first eight games, the second lowest figure in the alignment. The fewest attempts mark is held by Twin Falls at 52. Both have completed about 33 percent of their aerials.

Both Jones and Skyline Coach Mahlon Rasmuson run the veer — and that means run.

"Skyline is the same as it has been for a long time, running the veer with the guards pulling. But they have added more quarterback play this year with sprinouts and bootlegs," Jones said.

Doing that is junior quarterback Jeff Burtonshaw "who impresses me, not as a thrower, but as a very good runner," Jones said. "Our defense must contain him."

Which is just about what could be said of Twin Falls last year when Mike Rice was the Bruins' running quarterback. This year junior Doug Petersen has been handing off to running backs Corky Federico and Scott Morgan. Last week Petersen stunned the scouting reports and ran a 19-yard keeper.

Twin Falls goes into the game as healthy as it has been since pre-season with Sean Molyneux back for spot duty. The only usual starter missing will be cornerback Todd Jones.

BOISE — With the last of the berths in the state Class A-3 playoffs determined Tuesday night, the post-season Idaho high school football picture has taken shape.

Timberline High School of Weippe won an unusual three-way playoff over Lapwai and Potlatch in Lewiston Tuesday night to earn the second spot from District 2 in the playoffs. The three schools met in a modified 10-yard overtime plan to determine which team — all three finished 4-2 in District 2 A-3 competition — would advance to meet two-time defending state champion Homdale in the first round of the playoffs.

Timberline (6-3 for the season) won the honor, and will face the Trojans (7-1), ranked second in the latest United Press International poll, in Homedale on Saturday afternoon.

District 2 champ Grangeville, undefeated and rated No. 1 in the latest United Press International poll, had previously qualified for the playoffs and will meet District 4 champion Kimberly (7-2) in Kimberly at 1 p.m. Saturday.

Still to be determined are three of the six representatives in the playoffs for the A-1 division, which will conclude its regular season Friday night. Gem State Conference runner-up Idaho Falls (5-4) will travel to either Coeur d'Alene, Sandpoint or Lewiston for a first-round game on Nov. 12, depending upon who wins Friday's Coeur d'Alene-Sandpoint game in Sandpoint. A Couer d'Alene victory in that game would put the defending state champion and fifth-ranked Vikings, 6-3 for the season, into the playoffs. But a victory by Sandpoint (3-0) would force a tie-breaker to determine the District 1-2 champion since Lewiston (5-4) has already beteaten Sandpoint. The form of that tie-breaker would be up to the three schools involved.

In the other bracket, Caldwell (6-2) has already earned the right to host the runner-up from the Metro bracket (the four Ada County A-1 schools) in the first round of the playoffs on Nov. 11. The visitor in that game will be decided Thursday night when second-ranked Capital (6-2) and fourth-ranked Boise (7-2) will get together in Bronco Stadium here. Unless No. 3 Borah (7-2) knocks off No. 1 Meridian (9-0) on Friday night, the Capital-Boise winner will get the second Metro berth to the playoffs and Meridian will earn the first.

The Metro champion will host the Idaho Falls-Coeur d'Alene/Sandpoint/Lewiston winner in the second round of the playoffs in

Kimberly's defensive line, which Coach Gordon Hogan says must play well Saturday against Grangeville, prepares for its task during Wednesday's practice

Ground attacks may dictate battle of Bulldogs

A-3 Idaho State Playoffs

KIMBERLY — If all goes according to plan, the only time the football will go airborne in Saturday's first-round A-3 state playoff game between Grangeville and Kimberly is during punts and kickoffs.

Both teams (each nicknamed the Bulldogs) favor the run considerably. Though they can pass capably, they prefer to stick with belly plays, sweeps and the like.

Kimberly, 7-2, has three players who have gained close to 500 yards or more — quarterback Tim Ferrell, Troy Jackman and Tony Schroeder — and another, Brett Wright, who has more than 300 yards.

Grangeville, 8-1 and ranked number one in this week's United Press International coaches' poll, possesses a potentially dominant force in tailback Jeff Lindsley, a 6-2, 190-pound senior who rushed for 1,300 yards and scored 132 points this season.

Thus Grangeville Coach Chris Hyta could have been speaking for Kimberly as well as his own team when he said, "If we can get our running going, we'll run the whole game. If we can keep making four or five yards a crack. We're not afraid to mix it up inside."

The teams also mixed it up in last year's first round, Kimberly taking a 26-6 decision at its field. Kimberly capitalized on three Grangeville fumbles and two intercepted passes to build a 20-0 cushion by halftime.

"It was a big-play type of first half and it seemed like Kimberly was making them all," Hyta said. "We had a few breakdowns — well, they weren't even breakdowns. It was just that Ferrell would make a good play, get out of the grasp of a defender and throw the ball. The second half was pretty much even, but we got so behind so early it was hard to play catch-up."

Last season, however, Grangeville was making its first playoff appearance. Now Hyta's team, filled mostly with seniors, is inured to post-season pressure. Grangeville obviously would rather not travel the 330 miles or so to Kimberly for the second straight year, but the visitors won't let the trip disturb them excessively.

"It's really hard to travel eight hours on a bus and get ready to play on a strange field — we coaches have been trying to prepare them for that," Hyta said. "But all of them have been there before; they know it's expected.

"This time we're not just going to state; we're going there to win."

Grangeville's units appear equipped to give Hyta a winning combination. Though its offense relies on Lindsley, quarterback Doug Battles can throw effectively. He passed for 1,025 yards and 14 touchdowns this season, throwing mostly to 6-5, 190-pound tight end Brent Frei. Frei caught 35 passes for 600 yards and nine touchdowns.

Defensively, junior linebacker Brad Walters (5-9, 160) leads a group that allowed just 80 points — only 45 in the last eight games. Up front, Frei and Hunter Edwards are returning all-league defensive ends. The secondary has yielded just three touchdown passes all season; Lindsley, the right cornerback, hasn't been beaten deep all year, Hyta said.

Hyta feels the primary Kimberly player his defense will have to stop is Ferrell. "He's dynamite," the coach said. "He's a good runner, he's tall (6-2), so he can see over the

TWIN FALLS — Perry Hanchey can be excused the grouchy expression he wears in the accompanying photograph. You'd look peeved, too, if you were a University of Alabama football fan surrounded by a bunch of unappreciative Yankees.

Hanchey, one of Twin Falls' top amateur golfers and this week's guest forecaster, supports the Crimson Tide religiously. His loyalty to Alabama is pretty much summed up in these two statements: "I absolutely hate Notre Dame" and "I was in mourning for weeks after Bear Bryant died."

Being an Alabama fan is virtually a family obligation for Perry. His fa-

Clackamas, Ricks tabbed regional favorites

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

Cross Country

TWIN FALLS — Clackamas' men and the Ricks women rank as the heavy favorites for Saturday's Region 18 NJCAA Cross Country Championships.

The five regional teams that still belong to the National Junior College Athletic Association may well be getting together as an entity for the last time. The region is scheduled to be incorporated with the northern half (Utah) of Region 1 since 12 Oregon community colleges dropped out of national competition last spring.

Clackamas brings a powerhouse team into the men's division, currently ranked second nationally. However, host College of Southern Idaho will have a strong contender for individual honors in sophomore John Walsh. He and Brian Abshire of Clackamas and Brian Heath of North Idaho are expected to vie for the top individual honors.

Ricks, headed by Liz Lynch of Ireland and England's Karen Harvey, is a prohibitive favored in the women's division. They are expected to go one-two.

The meet will begin with the men's competition at 11 a.m. Saturday around a five-mile course at Canyon Springs Golf Course. The women, running a 3.1-mile course, will begin about 11:30 a.m.

CSI Coach Karl Kleinkopf said he felt that Clackamas will have too much strength for the Idaho teams, although the higher altitude might affect the outcome some.

"It looks to me like the battle will be for second place with CSI, Ricks and North Idaho," Kleinkopf said.

One thing helping Kleinkopf's outlook is "for the first time since the first meet of the year we will have all our people running together as a team. Most of my kids are healthy for a change and providing we have adequate workouts the rest of the week, I think they are all in pretty decent shape."

Under NJCAA rules, the top two teams in each region can advance to the national finals — slated this year in Hutchinson, Kans. — along with the top 15 individuals to run for personal honor.

However, Kleinkopf said, "From our school's standpoint we assess our showing in regional if we are second. Our rule of thumb is if we feel we can crack the top five at nationals, we'll go. I think from an individual standpoint, because there are only five schools here and some of them don't have complete teams, probably only those finishing in the top seven will be given a chance to advance."

Kleinkopf noted that Clackamas, CSI, Ricks and North Idaho will have full men's teams, Treasure Valley a partial. Only Clackamas, CSI and Ricks will have full women's teams.

Matthews, Murtaugh lead Mackay, 34-16

ARCO — Pratt Matthews capped a spectacular season by scoring four touchdowns and leading the Murtaugh Red Devils to a 34-16 triumph over the Mackay Miners in a high school football season finale.

The game was originally scheduled for last Friday but was postponed due to the earthquake which struck Idaho and the Intermountain area.

Matthews, who ravaged the Miners for 176 yards on 17 carries, scored on runs of 5, 1 and 2 yards and ran back an intercepted pass 50 yards for a touchdown. He finished the season with 1,093 yards.

Troy Rovig sparked Murtaugh's defensive effort with three interceptions as the Red Devils finished 3-6 overall and 3-4 in the Magic Valley Conference. Mackay slipped to 2-6 and 2-4, respectively.

Murtaugh	0	14	0	20—34
Mackay	8	0	0	8—16

M—Mackay 5 run (Jason Tribulla run)
M—Stastny 25 pass from Matthews (run failed)
M—Matthews 1 run (Tribulla run) 4:34 left in 4th quarter
M—Matthews 50 interception return (pass failed) 3:56
M—Matthews 2 run (pass failed)

Playoffs

Bronco Stadium on Nov. 19. GSC champion Highland (7-2) will entertain the Caldwell-Boise/Capital winner in the Idaho State University Minidome in Pocatello that same weekend.

The state A-1 championship game will be played in Bronco Stadium on Saturday, Nov. 26.

In the A-2 playoffs, District 4 champion Burley (4-5) gets the toughest draw in the tournament Saturday when it hosts defending state champion and No. 1-ranked Madison (9-0). Burley, which lost to Madison 28-6 at home last month in a Cross State Conference game, will meet the Bobcats again at Budge Field for a 2 p.m. game.

No. 2-ranked Middleton (6-2), the District 3 champion, will take on fourth-rated Post Falls (6-3) in Middleton Saturday afternoon, while third-ranked Salmon (6-1) — the runner-up in District 6 — will play District 5 champ Marsh Valley (7-2) in the Minidome Friday night. Fifth-rated Moscow (6-3), the District 2 winner, will encounter District 1 runner-up Wallace (7-2) in the University of Idaho's Kibbie Dome in Moscow on Friday afternoon.

Should Burley defeat Madison on Saturday, the Bobcats would meet the winner of the Salmon-Marsh Valley game in the Minidome on Nov. 11.

In Class A-3, the winner of Saturday's Kimberly-Grangeville game will have a date to meet the winner of Friday's Sugar-Salem-New Plymouth game on Nov. 11. The District 6 champion Diggers, 9-0 and ranked third in the state, will take on the District 3 runner-up Pilgrims Friday afternoon in the Minidome.

In the other A-3 bracket, fourth-ranked District 5 champion West Side (8-0) will meet District 6 runner-up West Jefferson (6-3) in the Minidome Friday afternoon.

If the Bulldogs get past Grangeville, they will either host Sugar-Salem or travel to New Plymouth.

In the A-4 playoffs, No. 1-ranked Castleford (8-0), the District 4 champion, will meet unranked Marsing (7-2), the District 3 winner, in Nampa's Bulldog Bowl at 7 p.m. Friday. Earlier Friday in the Kibbie Dome, District 1 champion and second-ranked Mullan (8-0) will take on third-ranked Deary (8-0) in an afternoon game.

The winners of those two games will play on Nov. 11 or 12 for the state title.

If Castleford beats Marsing, it would either host Mullan or face Deary in the Kibbie Dome.

In the Class A-4 8-man playoffs, which are not sanctioned by the Idaho High School Activities Association, No. 1-ranked Rockland (8-0) will host third-ranked Council (7-1) Friday afternoon, while No. 2 Garden Valley (8-0) will entertain fourth-ranked North Gem (6-2). The championship game will be played on Nov. 11 at the home field of the semifinal-game winner with the best record. If Rockland and Garden Valley are the surviving teams, the site would be determined by a coin toss.

field, and he's a good athlete, which can cause a lot of problems."

Kimberly, of course, often causes problems with its own fabled defense. Gordon Hogan's squad allowed a mere 95 points this year in reaching the playoffs for the fourth consecutive time.

And Kimberly wouldn't mind inducing Grangeville turnovers as it did last year. Indeed, taking the ball away has been one of Kimberly's hallmarks; it picked off approximately 20 passes and came up with 10 fumbles this season.

But Hogan knows his defense must come through with an unparalleled effort Saturday. "I think the defensive tackles and ends have got to play well," he said. "Because they do run it well."

Hogan may be wary of Grangeville's running attack, but he isn't overly concerned with the opposition's size advantage.

"We've played against bigger people all year; I guess we have to battle that again," he said.

How has Kimberly managed to subdue its bigger foes?

"That's something really hard to answer, other than desire," Hogan said. "It's not how big a kid is; it's how bad he wants it."

At playoff time, "wanting it" consumes every player's thoughts.

ther's side of the family hails from Georgia and Florida and, as Hanchey explained, "My dad picked up on them when Joe Namath was there." Namath, the Bear and many other Tide greats have come and gone, but Hanchey's faith remains strong. "I'll fight over that," he affirmed.

In the hallowed tradition of Times-News guest pickers, the majority of Hanchey's football experience is as a spectator rather than a participant. He grew up in Burlingame, Calif., and played football through his sophomore year in high school. Then he and his family moved to Twin Falls early in his junior year, after football practice had started. "By that time it was pretty much of a loss," he said. "I didn't bother trying to play my senior year."

However, when it comes to picking the winners, Hanchey is a potential All-Pro. During one recent autumn weekend in Pocatello, where Hanchey was participating in a golf tournament, he correctly selected the winners of three-way "parlays," one college and one professional, on successive days. This achievement was observed by Times-News talent scouts, who realized they might be witnessing the advent of another Jimmy the Greek.

Occasionally Perry approaches family or friends and attempts to capitalize on his expertise to improve his financial status. "I've been known to make a wager or two," he admitted. "Or three." It's a good bet that Hanchey can improve upon the 11-9 performance of last week's guest picker, The CSI Bird, who proved that talk is cheap.

Denny credits Phillies for his Cy Young

PHILADELPHIA (UPI) — John Denny, named Wednesday as the 1983 winner of the National League Cy Young Award, said he made great strides as a pitcher, and as a person, during his first full season with the Philadelphia Phillies.

Denny, a right-hander, credited the demanding conditioning program of Gus Hoefling and the handling of Phillies pitching coach Claude Osteen for his professional success and his friends, family and religious beliefs for the changes in his personal life.

"This award should go to all those I've mentioned," said Denny, who posted a 19-6 mark with a 2.37 ERA for the National League champions and received 20 of a possible 24 first-place votes with 103 points in the Cy Young balloting.

"This is not just my award and I will never view it that way," said the smiling, relaxed Denny at a news conference in Veterans Stadium.

That Denny contrasted sharply with the one who came to the Phillies late in the 1982 season following a 6-11 year with Cleveland and then went 0-2 while refusing to speak to the press.

"My attitude was full of hatred and bitterness," he said. "But I realized during the playoffs (against the Los Angeles Dodgers last month) that that was a wrong attitude and I tried to change. That has been beneficial in my profession. And it will be beneficial in my life."

Denny, who led the NL in wins and finished second in ERA this year, was followed in the Cy Young voting by Cincinnati right-hander Mario Soto, who received two first-place votes and 61 points after leading the NL with 18 complete games while posting a 17-13 record.

New York Mets' reliever Jesse Orosco (13-7, 1.47 ERA) placed third with 19 points and Montreal's Steve Rogers received 15 points for fourth, with each earning one first-place ballot.

Denny, who also received a second-place vote, appeared on 21 of the 24 ballots cast by members of the Baseball Writers Association of America.

UPI's Comeback Player of the Year, Denny is also the third Philadelphia Phillies pitcher to win the Cy Young in the last four years. Left-hander Steve Carlton claimed the prize in 1980 and 1982. Carlton, the only pitcher to win the award four times, fell to 15-16 in 1983 and was not named on any ballot.

But Denny said Carlton is still the Phillies' ace.

"Until he retires, in my mind he's the ace of the staff," Denny said. "He's a great pitcher . . . No matter what I accomplish, I don't think I can ever be compared to Steve Carlton."

Denny said Hoefling, a strength and flexibility coach, urged him, Carlton and other Phillies pitchers to work out during spring training by saying no one could know which one of them would win the 1983 Cy Young Award.

"Most of that went in one ear and out the other," he said. "But when I did hear it, I looked over at Steve Carlton . . . Never in my wildest dreams did I think that I would win this award."

Denny said he did not think about the progress of his season, which ended with a 13-1 surge that helped the Phillies to the National League crown, while it was occurring.

"I just tried to approach the game day by day, start by start," he said. "If I try to look down the road, try to look ahead, then the walls start crumbling for me."

By the same token, Denny said he has to put this year's success behind him when the 1984 season rolls around.

"You've got to forget what's happened — success or failure — and just look ahead, be prepared to give it your all," he said. "That's what I'm going to try to do."

Denny said he would not worry so much about improving his performance but try "to work as hard as you can mentally and physically to give it your best."

Also receiving votes in this year's Cy Young balloting were Larry McWilliams of Pittsburgh, Philadelphia reliever Al Holland, Atlanta's Craig McMurtry, Bob Welch of Los Angeles, Houston's Nolan Ryan and Chicago relief pitcher Lee Smith.

But Angels have gluts at certain positions

California manager McNamara reportedly covets Rose

By MILTON RICHMAN
UPI sports editor

John McNamara, the California Angels' manager, wouldn't mind having Pete Rose.

That's not much of an upset because McNamara, who managed the San Diego Padres from 1974 to 1978, knows what Rose can do. Or what he COULD do. Now that's the question. How much can Pete Rose help anyone anymore? Keep in mind he'll be 43 in April and he was no world beater at 42.

You be the general manager. Say you have your choice between Rod Carew and Pete Rose, a pair of sure-fire Hall of Famers for the future, which one do you want if you're trying to win the same way everyone else is — right away. Do you sign the 38-year-old Carew, who batted .339 this year and was the American League's second leading hitter, or do you go for the four years older Rose, who nose-dived to .245 this season and sometimes looked as if he were all through despite his seemingly endless competitive desire.

Which one do you want? Or maybe you'll take both. Why not? Money will do it every time.

As long as you're still sitting in the manager's chair, how about Goose Gossage? I know. You'll take him, too, right?

The Angels have a good shot at all three, Rose, Carew and Gossage, and quite possibly will wind up with at least two of them.

But there's a bit of a hitch.

"The problem," says Buzzie Bavasi, the man who is the real GM of the Angels, "is we can't have too many men who do the same thing. John (McNamara) likes Rose. We let Rose's attorney, Rueven Katz, know we were interested in Pete the day he was released by the Phillies, but haven't heard anything more from him. I like Rose. I like Carew, too, but you can't have four first basemen on one ball club. We've also got (Daryl) Sconiers and (Ron) Jackson who play first base."

That's only part of the problem.

How many men do you think the Angels employed as designated hitters this year?

Would you believe 10? Count 'em yourself. There were the two Jacksons (Reggie and Ron), Brian Downing, Carew, Sconiers, Freddie Lynn, Doug DeCinces, Bobby Clark, Juan Beniquez and Jerry Narron.

"We have too many players who do the same thing," Bavasi said. "Too many first basemen and too many DH's. "We can't use everybody."

If the Angels go after Rose and get him, that'll give them another first baseman and another DH, two things they don't need. Unless, of course, they don't re-sign Carew, who's seeking a multiple-year contract. Carew filed for his free agency Monday but the Angels still have time to sign him until Thursday, when he automatically becomes part of the re-entry process that will give all the other clubs a chance to sign him in New York on Nov. 7.

There has been some speculation the Angels don't really care about keeping Carew and are only going through the motions of re-signing the seven-time batting champ so as not to alienate any of their fans, but I didn't get that impression talking with Bavasi.

"We want Rod," he said. "We want him as long as we can afford him. We've got until Thursday to shore up our difficulties with him. He's the only one I got left. The others are all signed."

Those others Bavasi means are Bob Boone, who had filed for free agency already last week and Downing and Valentine, both eligible to become free agents.

Whether the Angels re-sign Carew or not, I think they're going to focus all their attention on getting Gossage. The 32-year-old fireballing reliever has filed for his free agency and according to the rules, the Yankees can still retain the right to negotiate with him, which I'm pretty sure they will do. So far, however, they haven't shown any great inclination to meet his terms.

As always, Bavasi is very careful about tampering. He goes by the rules.

"When the Yankees tell me they're not interested in Gossage anymore, then we'll make our interest known," he said. "I take the attitude a player still belongs to the club he has been with for a number of years until he and the club let the world know they are not interested in each other anymore."

The Yankees are still interested in Gossage. Not to the degree the Angels are. Even if it turns into a bidding contest, at the very end, Gossage has the final vote, and I think he'll cast it for Anaheim.

Seaver will remain with Mets next year

NEW YORK (UPI) — Tom Seaver will be back to pitch for the New York Mets next season.

Frank Cashen, general manager of the Mets, announced Wednesday the club had notified Seaver that it will pick up his option through the 1984 season.

When Seaver signed a contract with the Mets last December after being acquired in a trade with the Cincinnati Reds, he signed a one-year contract with options through the 1986 season.

"Although we didn't have to do this now, we decided to notify Tom that we were picking up the option for next season," said Cashen. "We felt that he proved something in 1983 and that he will be able to help us in 1984."

A three-time Cy Young Award winner, the 38-year-old right-hander posted a 9-14 record with a 3.55 ERA this season but was victimized by a lack of runs. In 13 of his 14 losses the Mets scored three runs or less. He still finished 10th in the league in innings pitched with 231 and did not miss a start in 34 outings. He also led the club with 135 strikeouts.

Pizza magnate will leave baseball to others

New Detroit owner won't clutter the kitchen

KALAMAZOO, Mich. (UPI) — The Domino's Pizza chain magnate who purchased the Detroit Tigers last month said Wednesday he will leave day-to-day operations of the club to the team organization.

Thomas F. Monaghan, who was in Kalamazoo to attend the dedication of a business center named after former Tigers owner John F. Fetzer, said it would be "foolish" for him to step in and influence team affairs.

"My way of managing is to get the best people available and get out of the way," Monaghan said. "You've got the best people in baseball in the Tigers organization and I think it would be foolish for me to meddle."

Monaghan said the only active role he plans to have in team operations at present is "as a student with Jim Campbell — and Mr. Fetzer — as the teachers."

When asked if he planned any major changes, he shrugged and said, "Each year that Sparky's (Anderson) been there they've gotten better."

Monaghan, who paid a reported $43 million for the American League club, admitted most of his thoughts have been about baseball since the purchase and not about his chain of pizza stores, which presently number about 1,100.

Satisfying Tiger fans will be the prime objective, Monaghan said.

"I can only say what it's been at Domino's," he said. "I don't know a debit from a credit. I just try to satisfy the customers . . . and let the bottom line take care of itself."

Monaghan said he first met with Campbell in late February or early March to express his interest in purchasing the club. He said Campbell did everything possible to discourage him but finally agreed to arrange a meeting with Fetzer.

Fetzer also was not very encouraging on their first meeting on March 31 but the deal began to come together following a second meeting on Aug. 25, Monaghan said.

Monaghan said Fetzer "explained how the Tigers were his life" and related to him his interest in the preservation of the team as it had been during his 23 years as "a very active member of baseball."

Monaghan said for years he had dreamed of owning the Tigers and confided "my big fear was any day there was going to be an announcement that someone had bought the Tigers and I wouldn't be in on it."

After day-long talks, Reuss re-signs with L.A.

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — The Los Angeles Dodgers Wednesday night capped a full day of negotiation by announcing the signing of pitcher Jerry Reuss to a four-year contract.

No further details of the pact were revealed.

Reuss, 34, had played out his option after five years with the Dodgers and was the only left-handed starter in the major leagues eligible for next Monday's re-entry draft.

"Jerry Reuss is one of the finest pitchers in baseball," Dodger vice president Al Campanis said. "Our pitching staff was the finest in baseball last year, and we hope it will continue to remain at the top for years to come."

Reuss was 12-11 with a 2.94 ERA in 1983, well off his club-leading 18-11 mark of 1982. He led the team in two categories — most strikeouts in a game (11) and longest losing streak (7).

The left-hander won six of his last seven decisions in helping the Dodgers to the 1983 National League West title. He is 65-46 with the Dodgers and 173-140 overall in his 14-year major league career.

"I've been with the Dodgers five years, five happy years," Reuss said at a Dodger Stadium news conference. "The Dodgers are paying me very well for the next four years. Maybe I could have earned more as a free agent. Who knows?"

Briefly in Sports

USFL considering instant replay

NEW YORK (UPI) — The United States Football League is studying the possibility of using television's instant replay on a test basis to settle disputed calls by officials, it was announced Wednesday by league commissioner Chet Simmons.

Simmons said there were "no set plans" to use instant replay in the 1984 season but officials "are looking into the possibility ... We have four months to go to the beginning of the season, and we hope we might be able to use the concept."

He said he was sure the system would show that more referee calls are supported by TV evidence than the opposite.

NCAA lifts Miami probation

MIAMI (UPI) — The NCAA said Wednesday that a two-year probation against the University of Miami football program has been lifted.

An NCAA enforcement representative visited the school Tuesday and said he determined that the school's athletic department was in compliance with the organization's regulations.

The school was placed on probation on Nov. 1, 1981 for recruiting violations after a 30-month NCAA investigation. The violations included making excessive recruiting contacts, providing transportation for local recruits and spending excessive money to entertain recruits.

As a result of the violations, the Hurricanes were barred from appearing in a bowl game in 1981 and were limited to signing 20 recruits instead of the maximum of 30 in 1982.

Bills lose wide receiver Butler

ORCHARD PARK, N.Y. (UPI) — The Buffalo Bills said Wednesday veteran wide receiver Jerry Butler will be lost to the team for the rest of the season, after it was found he suffered additional knee damage in Sunday's game against the New Orleans Saints.

Bills' spokesman L. Budd Thalman said it was first believed Butler had suffered torn cartilage in his left knee, but arthroscopic surgery Wednesday showed the former Clemson standout had ligament damage.

Butler, who had grabbed 36 passes on the season for 385 yards and three touchdowns, will be replaced in the starting lineup by Mike Mosley, who caught two touchdown passes in Buffalo's 27-21 victory over the Saints.

Ex-Bronco files malpractice suit

DENVER (UPI) — Former Denver Bronco running back Otis Armstrong has filed a $24 million malpractice lawsuit against the physicians who treated him, claiming they wrongly diagnosed his condition.

Armstrong, forced to retire in 1980 because of back problems, accused seven doctors and a neurological clinic of "fraudulent concealment" of a neck injury he suffered in a game against Houston Nov. 2, 1980.

At that time, Armstrong said two physicians diagnosed his condition as congenital spinal stenosis, a narrowing of the spinal canal. Armstrong said he was warned that further play could result in paralysis.

The lawsuit claimed the ailment was not congenital, and resulted from an injury that occurred in training camp July 31, 1980. Armstrong said the ailment was aggravated by subsequent injuries.

Ineligible QB wants to play

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Tulane quarterback Jon English, who lost his starting post because the NCAA ruled him ineligible, Wednesday asked Supreme Court Justice Byron White for an order allowing him to play while he appeals the decision.

White made no immediate decision on the emergency application, which sought a temporary injunction against the NCAA.

English, the son of Tulane Coach Wally English, was declared ineligible by the NCAA because he did not sit out a year after transferring to Tulane from Iowa State.

He filed suit against the NCAA challenging the eligibility decision and played the first six games of the season under a variety of court orders.

The 5th U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals refused to grant English a restraining order on Sept. 23 and he has exhausted all appeals in state courts.

He has been forced to sit out the past three games.

Striking NBA refs on picket line

BOSTON (UPI) — At least a dozen striking NBA referees and their chief attorney picketed Wednesday night in front of Boston Garden to "bring the message to the fans" about their impasse with the league.

The officials also distributed 2,000 toy whistles before the game.

"It's just a fun thing with the fans, and to take away the boredom of the picket line," referee Ed Rush said.

The referees have not worked any exhibition games and have been replaced with substitutes by the league.

"The league made a decision to lock us out and we're trying for fair negotiations," Rush said. "Unfortunately, to quote one of their owners, they want to bring us to our knees. What they're saying is that we're not worth it and we can be replaced."

Top horse injured, destroyed

ARCADIA, Calif. (UPI) — Roving Boy, the 1982 2-year-old Eclipse Award winner, shattered both hind legs just strides after winning the Alibhai Handicap at Santa Anita Wednesday and had to be destroyed.

Roving Boy, owned and bred by R.E. Hibbert, fell several strides after the finish and was taken by ambulance from the track to Santa Anita's Equine Hospital on the backstretch. Doctors said both legs were broken — one shattered so badly there was "nothing to work with" — and they were unable to save him.

Jockey Eddie Delahoussaye was taken to the track's first aid room but was released after examination.

Duran arrives in Las Vegas

LAS VEGAS, Nev. (UPI) — Three-time world champion Roberto Duran arrived in southern Nevada Wednesday to begin on-site training for his Nov. 10 title bout against undisputed middleweight champion Marvelous Marvin Hagler.

The Panamanian trained in McAfee, N.J., during September and moved his camp to Palm Springs, Calif., Oct. 1. Duran is seeking an unprecedented fourth weight division title in the 15-round bout with Hagler at Caesars Palace Hotel.

"I think Hagler's getting scared," said Duran. "Others have been scared of him, but I'm not. Now the tables are turned."

Bill proposed for local fans

WASHINGTON (UPI) — Sen. Rudy Boschwitz, admitting the odds are against passage, said Wednesday he will file legislation to give local bidders a chance to keep major league baseball teams at home when the teams are for sale.

"We'll have to hustle it around to make it effective," he said. "I'm being pretty frank that it's uphill."

Ex-center will become free man after spending 11 years in prison

ProBasketball

LA GRANGE, Ky. (UPI) — Tom Payne, a muscular 7-2 center who played basketball for the University of Kentucky and the NBA Atlanta Hawks, was paroled Wednesday after serving 11 years of a life term for a rape and sodomy conviction.

"I had a dream, I had a dream of getting out there with my family," Payne said at a Kentucky State Reformatory news conference with reporters.

A five-member state parole board agreed to release Payne on Friday from the medium security prison based on time served, his behavior in prison and his chance to make it in the outside world.

"This is something that will never happen to me again in my lifetime," said Payne, who brushed tears from his eyes at one point.

Payne, the first black college player for the legendary Kentucky coach Adolph Rupp, continued to maintain his innocence, saying he hopes to overturn his conviction in an appeal pending before the Sixth U.S. Circuit Court of Appeals in Cincinnati.

Payne, who hugged his wife and wife's mother and friends in an emotional scene behind bars, said a successful appeal would help remove the admitted stigma to his reputation.

Payne said he hoped to resume the professional basketball career which he began with the Hawks after playing one year at Kentucky.

The Hawks still hold his contract and have first claim to his services.

"If they don't want me, they shouldn't hold me," said Payne, who jogged into the prison visitors center dressed in a blue green sweater and blue jeans.

If he doesn't play for Atlanta, Payne said he hopes to play for former St. Louis University Coach Ron Ekker, now the coach of the new Louisville Catbirds franchise of the Continental Basketball Association.

At the same time, Payne said, "Basketball has not been my predominant thought."

According to Payne, who still sports a 34-inch waist, "I never really thought until last year that I would get back into basketball."

Payne, his voice shaking at times, said he didn't want to put "all my eggs in a basket to play basketball."

Any decision on resuming his pro career will be made after speaking with his family and parole officer, according to Payne, who has maintained a daily weightlifting program at the reformatory.

Asked about his attitude in prison, Payne said, "I asked the creator many times, how long, how long, how long."

Payne was Kentucky's No. 2 scorer (16.9 average) and top rebounder (10.1) in the 28 games he played with the team that was eliminated by Western Kentucky in the NCAA Mideast Regional.

No. 3 Auburn should nip tough Maryland

By DAVE RAFFO
UPI sports writer

The last thing No. 3 Auburn or No. 7 Maryland needs is a game against another tough team. But that's what they'll get when they face off at Auburn Saturday.

For Auburn, the game is hardly a rest from a rugged Southeastern Conference schedule, which saw the Tigers topple Florida last week only to have to come back against Georgia next week. Maryland sweated out an Atlantic Coast Conference win over North Carolina that puts the Terrapins in the major bowl picture — if they can get past Auburn and Clemson next week.

Bo Jackson came through for Auburn when the Tigers needed it most last week and he should be able to solve the Maryland defense, which had to survive a missed two-point conversion attempt by North Carolina for a 28-26 win.

Prediction: Auburn 27, Maryland 17.

In other games Saturday:

East

Boston College 35, Army 6 — Eagles fired up after toppling Penn State.

West Virginia 31, Temple 7 — Mountaineers bounce back strong.

Penn State 38, Brown 3 — Nittany Lions too much for Bears.

South

Georgia 22, Florida 15 — Bulldogs knock Gators from SEC chase.

Clemson 21, North Carolina 14 — Tar Heels still not over Maryland loss.

Miami 20, East Carolina 6 — Hurricanes smother Pirates' offense.

Alabama 31, Louisiana State 22 — Tide wins shootout.

Midwest

Illinois 30, Minnesota 9 — Tough part is over for Illini.

Notre Dame 17, Pittsburgh 14 — Would you believe Irish in Cotton Bowl?

Nebraska 42, Iowa State 14 — Cornhuskers defense proves a point.

Southwest

Texas 25, Houston 7 — Longhorns roll behind Todd Dodge.

Southern Methodist 33, Rice 6 — Mustangs find offense again.

Oklahoma 25, Missouri 14 — Sooners revved up to meet Nebraska.

West

UCLA 27, Oregon 13 — Bruins smelling roses now.

Washington 22, Arizona 17 — Huskies keep hopes alive.

Arizona State 28, California 10 — Sun Devils snap two-game slide.

Southern California 19, Stanford 10 — Trojans shooting for winning season.

No clear-cut Heisman candidate exists

NEW YORK (UPI) — When Herschel Walker turned pro after his junior year last spring, he left as great a void in the Heisman Trophy field as in the Georgia backfield.

While the unbeaten Bulldogs have done just fine without Walker, Heisman Trophy voters still seek a standout candidate as his successor with the season just five weeks from completion. The Heisman winner will be announced on Dec. 2.

Nebraska All-America running back Mike Rozier and Brigham Young quarterback Steve Young lead the wide-open field. Rozier spearheads one of the greatest college offenses of all time while Young is having one of the best statistical passing years in history.

Because the last 11 Heisman winners have been running backs and Rozier was the only underclassman beside Walker to receive votes last year, the Nebraska I-back would have to be considered the favorite.

Joining Rozier on the short list of backs in contention are Greg Allen of Florida State and Navy's Napoleon McCallum. Quarterbacks Jeff Hostetler of West Virginia, Boomer Esiason of Maryland, Duke's Ben Bennett, Chuck Long of Iowa and Boston College's Doug Flutie should all get some support.

Rozier, Nebraska's all-time leading rusher, heads the nation's top rushing offense for the second straight year. Through the Cornhuskers' first eight games, he led the country with 1,219 yards and 17 touchdowns, while his 152.4 yards per game was second to McCallum. Rozier's most impressive statistic, however, is his 7.5 yards per carry this year and 6.9 average over his three-year career.

The 5-foot-10, 210-pound transfer from Coffeeville (Kan.) Junior College can become the second Heisman winner to play for a national champion — joining 1976 winner Tony Dorsett of Pittsburgh — if he gains the award and Nebraska holds its No. 1 rating.

STEVE YOUNG
BYU's star quarterback could contend

Rozier, of Camden, N.J., has established himself as another in the long line of great Big Eight running backs.

"I think Rozier is the best back I've ever seen at Nebraska," Missouri Coach Warren Powers said. "He just wore us into the ground. He reminds me of Billy Sims the way he runs."

Two other Big Eight backs, Marcus Dupree of Oklahoma and Earnest Anderson of Oklahoma State, were supposed to be in Heisman contention this year. But Dupree's stormy career with the Sooners ended when he transferred two weeks ago and Anderson is just now rounding into shape from injuries.

That leaves Allen, who has 825 yards and 10 TDS, and McCallum, averaging 159.7 yards per game for a 1,118 total, as the other top running backs in the Heisman chase.

Rozier's advantages include playing in the national spotlight and behind the awesome Cornhusker offensive line. Rozier probably would be an overwhelming favorite if he had more carries, but due to Nebraska's balance and explosiveness, he has fewer rushes than many top backs.

Young is the great-great grandson of Brigham Young and his father was a three-time BYU letter-winner, but he hardly needed an "in" to win the Cougars' quarterback job.

Before last weekend's games, the 6-2 senior southpaw from Greenwich, Conn. had completed 196-of-277 attempts for a whopping 70.8 percentage, 2,633 yards and 20 TDs. If Young's 170.1 efficiency rating holds up, he'll be the third-highest single-season ranked passer ever.

Playing in the Western Athletic Conference doesn't bring a player great respect, however, proven by the poor support former BYU quarterbacks Jim McMahon and Marc Wilson received in Heisman voting. McMahon — Young's predecessor at BYU — was the highest career passer and Wilson also had better statistics than Young but both finished far behind.

Hostetler and Esiason attracted a good deal of pre-season attention and lead winning teams but neither have the numbers to match Young.

Texas, Nebraska won't play showdown

DENVER (UPI) — Officials of the NCAA and the universities of Nebraska and Texas say there will be no national championship football game between the two schools next January.

Barry Fey, a promoter of rock concerts and other events in Denver, had guaranteed the schools $1.5 million each to play the game at either the Superdome or the Rose Bowl in mid-January. But an NCAA spokesman said the game between the nation's two top-ranked teams would violate NCAA rules, and officials of the schools said they were not interested.

David Cawood, assistant executive director of communications for the NCAA, said NCAA Division I schools are limited to 11 games and a post-season bowl game each season.

"A game like this simply couldn't happen without some special act of legislation by the NCAA," Cawood said Tuesday. "I'd say it's just impossible."

DeLoss Dodds, Texas athletic director, said he had written to Fey saying the "game is contrary to NCAA rules and we simply aren't pursuing it."

"As a fan, I'd love to see such a game," Dodds said. "As an administrator, it simply won't happen."

And Nebraska Athletic Director Bob Devaney said the Cornhuskers "simply aren't interested in that one."

"I don't care how much money he might guarantee or whether or not he gets approval from the NCAA," Devaney said. "I'm not going to waste my time talking about it."

"The national champion is decided at the end of the bowl season by the polls," he said. "And besides, we're No. 1, so why would we want to play the No. 2 team?"

Fey proposed the game in telegrams to officials of both schools. He offered each of the universities a guaranteed $1.5 million, plus 25 percent of the gross television revenue and a legal contingency fund.

In the telegram, Fey suggested the game be played Jan. 14 or 15 "in either the Superdome in New Orleans, La., or the Rose Bowl in Pasadena, Calif., both of which I have on hold."

Bill Geremesz, manager of the Rose Bowl, confirmed the dates were "penciled in" for Fey.

"He's holding the date," Geremesz said. "But when they're penciled in, that means we can erase them."

Fey used go-betweens to approach Dodds and Devaney. Eddie Crowder, former University of Colorado football coach and current CU athletic director, was used as a reference to Devaney. And a friend of country-western singer Willie Nelson approached Dodds on Fey's behalf.

Dodds said Texas head Coach Fred Akers also got one of the telegrams.

"Fred walked into my office with the mailgram in his hand and said, 'Did you see this?'" Dodds said. "I just shook my head, yes, and that was the end of the conversation."

Hockey

Despite controversy, Soviets will play exhibitions in U.S.

ST. LOUIS (UPI) — The United States Olympic hockey team will play a six-game series against a team from the Soviet Union in December, officials announced Wednesday.

The series, which had faced possible cancellation because of harsh reaction to the Korean airliner disaster, will include a game Dec. 16 in St. Louis.

The first game of the series will be Dec. 9 in Lake Placid, N.Y., — the site of the 1980 Olympics, where the U.S. beat the Russians and went on to win the gold medal.

The rest of the series features games Dec. 11 in Minneapolis, Dec. 12 in Cleveland, Dec. 15 in Cincinnati and Dec. 18 in Indianapolis.

"We are happy that a series we feel the U.S. hockey team needs so much to be representative in the Olympics in February will go on," said Walter Bush, the chairman of the U.S. Olympic Hockey Committee.

Bush said at a news conference that the U.S. team will play a squad called the Moscow All Stars, which is likely to include some players who will be on the Soviet hockey team in the 1984 Olympics in Sarajevo, Yugoslavia.

The U.S. team, which is playing a 66-game exhibition schedule to prepare for the Olympics, currently has a record of 14-7-7. The team played a four-game series against the Soviet Wings earlier this season and won one game, lost two and tied one.

The squad also has played exhibition games against several NHL and minor league clubs and is playing games against college teams and amateur squads from other countries.

The leading scorer on the U.S. team is Pat LaFontaine, who was born in St. Louis and was a first-round draft pick of the New York Islanders this year. LaFontaine has scored 17 goals and added 18 assists in 25 games.

"At this point I think the team is a little farther along than the 1980 team," Bush said. "We started a little bit earlier and it seems the team is coming together faster than I expected. But that's better than having it be at loose ends."

Harry Ornest, the owner of the St. Louis Blues, said he was happy an agreement could be reached to play the exhibition game in St. Louis.

Tennis

Evert and Connors: together once more

HOUSTON (UPI) — Chris Evert Lloyd and Jimmy Connors, capitalizing on the public's undying curiosity in their one-time love affair, reunite for the first time in nine years today in a rich mixed doubles tennis tournament.

Both admitted Wednesday money now was their primary bond.

Evert, who was engaged to Connors when they played their last mixed doubles match in 1974, said the reunion was a publicity draw based on practicality.

"People don't come to see forehands and backhands. They come to see the different people they've read about," Evert told a news conference upon the pair's arrival for the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles Championship.

"It was a sportswriter's dream when we were together. I can understand why they make a big deal of it, but the truth of the matter is that we have played mixed doubles before and I feel comfortable playing with him and I'm sure he feels comfortable playing with me, and it was an ideal situation to team up together," she said.

Evert described the pair as "an attraction" and said she would be "surprised" if she and Connors won the $100,000 first prize.

Connors, who does not regularly play doubles, said he asked Evert to team with him. Both dropped other commitments to make this tournament.

"I need all the help I can get out there," Connors said as he sat next to Evert.

The top seed in the tournament is Evert's husband, John, and Wendy Turnbull — winners of the 1983 Wimbledon mixed doubles. Evert said she expected that duo to dominate the tournament, and hoped to avoid playing her husband.

"It's very difficult playing with a spouse. You get very emotional. But since there are no feelings between Jimmy and I, I'm sure we'll make a great team," she said jokingly.

The pair has had some success together on the court. They won a 1974 "Love-Doubles" exhibition match in Las Vegas against Billie Jean King and Ilie Nastase. They also were the runner-up in a U.S. Open.

Connors, who won his fifth U.S. Open singles title this year, is a two-time Wimbledon winner.

Evert also is a five-time U.S. Open champion and a three-time winner of the women's singles title at Wimbledon.

Connors and Evert made cracks about their past romance, but emphasized they felt comfortable together on the court.

"We are friends and we do see each other at tournaments," Evert said.

"It's a relaxed atmosphere. We were engaged nine to 10 years ago, that's a long time ago. Things have changed since then. Hopefully, we're both a little more mature. We've grown up and chosen our lives. We have a very nice friendship."

Connors and Evert meet local favorite Zina Garrison and Jimmy Brown during the first round of play tonight following the Lloyd-Turnbull match against Eliot Teltscher and Beth Herr.

No pressure on Hu Na to return back to China

HOUSTON (UPI) — Hu Na, China's former top-rated female tennis star, said Wednesday she has not been pressured to return to China since she was granted asylum six months ago.

"Before the American government granted probation (asylum), a lot of people and the (Chinese) government asked me to go back. But after the probation was granted, nobody has tried to get me to return," Hu Na said through an interpreter.

The 20-year-old native of the People's Republic of China is paired with Marty Riessen as one of 16 teams in the $400,000 World Mixed Doubles Championship.

When she is not attending tennis camp in Tampa, Fla., she lives in San Diego, Calif., with a Chinese-American family.

Public may inspect management plan today

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JEROME — Management of Idaho's furbearing animals will become more precise under a five-year plan that will be unveiled for public review today at the Idaho Department of Fish and Game's regional office in Jerome.

Anyone with any special interest in the plan is invited to comment on this first step toward expanding Idaho's knowledge of its furbearers with an eye toward increasing population and harvest.

The office's open house will run from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. today, with personnel available to answer any questions or take comments — negative or positive — in this new management project.

Gary Will, Region 4 wildlife manager, explains it very simply.

"Our knowledge of some of these species is lacking in a lot of areas, both through research and inventories by department personnel. But more importantly, under this management plan, we will be relying more on the trappers themselves to provide information through questionnaires and bringing specimens for biological checking."

Will ticked off several proposals that might catch the public's eye:

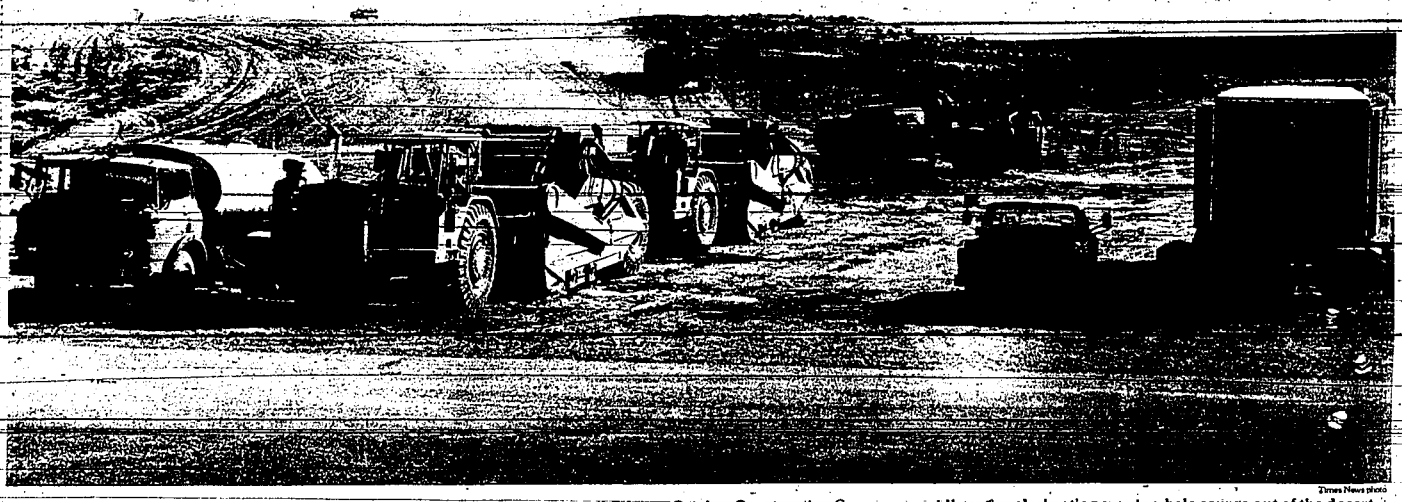

- Consideration of a season for fisher and otter and for providing total protection for kit fox, red squirrel, wolf and wolverine;
- Assessment of the advisability of placing a royalty on furs sold in Idaho to generate revenue to support a fur management program;
- Consideration of modifying legislation that restricts sale of parts of animals to include fur, scent glands, claws, or anything that might have some marketable value;
- Consideration of an increase in fees, partially to increase law enforcement efforts;
- Consideration of an accidental catch regulation on some of the species that have no open season. The purpose of such a rule change would be to provide trappers with a means of legally picking up those animals and hauling them to the department "so we can collect biological information" even on the closed species;
- Authorization of concurrent seasons for muskrat and mink;
- Consideration of regulations on hound hunting for certain species that would limit the number of dogs that may be run in a pack. This change would affect raccoon and bobcat hunting primarily. It would help "stem conflict with hound and other types of hunters," Will said;
- Resolution of situations in which some animals may not be appropriately classified and evaluation of the advantages and disadvantages and advisibility of requesting the commission to change those classifications. Will said one idea might be to change the badger from classification as an unprotected species to that of a furbearer, and to provide some control of harvest in cases of threat to populations. Moving the kit fox, red squirrel and wolverine from protected non-game status to furbearing classification would allow, at the Idaho Fish and Game Commission's later discretion, a specific harvest season in pockets where the populations became too large or attained self-sustaining and harvestable numbers;
- Consideration of allowing pursuit-only seasons where practical for bobcats, lynx and raccoon to provide more training and recreational opportunity to houndsmen and their dogs;
- Proposals for seasons through 1985.

In this section, those proposals would be for a beaver season Nov. 1-April 30; bobcat and lynx, Dec. 10-Dec. 31; martin, mink and muskrat, Nov. 1-March 31; and raccoon and red fox, Nov. 1-Jane 31. It would close coyote, badger, skunk, weasel, fisher, kit fox, otter and wolverine hunting seasons.

Will said the department is interested in finding some answers to the question of opening fisher and otter for hunting in Idaho.

"The seasons on fisher and for otter have been closed for many, many years," Will said. "We are hearing more and more reports of sighting of those species. We are inclined to believe that there are now sufficient numbers in at least some areas to allow a limited harvest. But we need more input and information before taking that step."

Will said some of the species are making a comeback. He notes there have been a few sightings of wolverines in the northern valley rim of mountains and one being accidentally trapped a few years ago in the Galena area.

Earth haulers carry overburden off No. 13 fairway to fill low spots on the 10th fairway as Owyhee Construction Company rapidly carves Jackpot's new nine-hole course out of the desert.

Lakes, hills and length put challenge in new Jackpot nine

By LARRY HOVEY
Times-News writer

JACKPOT — "We want it to look like God made it, not like some contractor pushed it into place."

Ed Honeycutt, the project coordinator for Owyhee Construction's mining division with the background of participating in golf course construction, has a feeling that everyone is going to be extremely happy with the new nine holes at the Jackpot Golf Course.

"We're showing people how to work — how to move dirt," said Honeycutt as he viewed all nine fairways — complete with six- and three-acre lakes — already roughed out after just nine days of work. "Today we're spending about $3,000 an hour to get it into shape.

"That's how you make money on these things. Put a lot of iron (big equipment) and good men out there," said Honeycutt with a laugh, noting that his company had been the low bidder by about $140,000.

"I've helped work on 72 of these golf courses," he said. "The back nine at Jerome, remodeling work at Crane Creek, Sand Creek in Idaho Falls, the second nine at Blackfoot, Hidden Paradise northwest of Fairfield that you would probably know about — and a lot of courses in northern Idaho you might not know about. Seventy-two of them. Go ahead, ask me how many we've been paid for?"

When the request was made, he chuckled, noting "about half of them. The last one was Shamanah (in Boise) and you know they've filed backruptcy."

While Jackpot golfers don't have to worry about Owyhee not getting paid, they will benefit from that experience.

"A lot of these men have been with us on several courses and they understand what it takes to make it come out right. Like our finish man on the D3 (bulldozer)," Honeycutt said. "He's been with us 12 years and he can do things with that blade no one else can. He is an artist."

This new Jackpot nine is not going to be a walker's dream. The fairways use all the topography at the site and only a couple of the holes could be considered flat. One surprise has been the lack of lava rock outcropping, allowing Owyhee to complete all of the work with bulldozers.

"Just in one area, on No. 13, did we run into a situation where we had to use a D8 pushed by a D9. But after we cut through about 18 inches of that, it was good working again. I think that's where the difference in the bids came," he said. "I think some of those bids included some anticipated rock blasting that we found wasn't necessary."

There is remarkably little rock on a large part of the site, and Honeycutt was pleased to find a surprising amount of surplus top soil available for shifting to cover the areas where rock was bared.

Honeycutt's ideas for the back nine will make make it considerably better than the existing nine for a couple of reasons.

First, the lay of the land offers more in the way of scene change. The course rambles well south of the existing clubhouse and nearly as far north as the current nine. The 13th tee is the highest spot and offers a full view of the course and the town. It is, in Honeycutt's word, more picturesque.

Secondly, with his experience in building courses, Honeycutt spots things that can enhance the flow of the player's game and his eye.

"We'll be putting in several things are aren't in the plans or the contract," he said. "For instance that mound (to the left of No. 17 fairway) isn't in the plans but we're putting it in and we'll be planting trees on it to cover up that old pump house."

On No. 15, he noted, "those mounds along the ridge aren't in the plans but they give the feeling of being in mountains and being backed by that ridge (to the west side of town). It gives the golfer the feeling they belong there. It gives the whole fairway a flow that is pleasing to the eye."

The 13th tee has been dubbed "Snob Hill" by Honeycutt, who plans to make this the showpiece of the new nine. On windy days, No. 13 will be murder.

Another thing he's done is to extend and deepen the lake that will confront golfers on holes 15 and 17.

"The plans called for a four-foot deep lake. We're making it six feet deep, first because at four feet it would be too shallow and never clear up. Second, because it gives more of a feeling of mountains and the roll of the land," he said.

That lake will cover six acres in area and runs 200 yards in length.

A second lake — about half that size but more kidney shaped — has been skived out to the right of No. 17. But it also will come into play for anyone trying to "cut the corner" on the existing eighth hole.

"I'm just tired of these guys driving the green on No. 8," said host Pro Bill Downs in taking the blame — or the credit — for that addition. "They can still shoot for the green but if they miss, they'll pay for it."

At the same time, Owyhee will line and seal the two lakes on the existing nine.

The other thing that is certain about Honeycutt's design is that every golfer will know exactly when the dogleg comes into effect.

Each of his "pivot points" in the fairway is cut into the earth, again maintaining that "flow" he constantly seeks.

The numbering and play of the back nine will be different than originally

Deer hunting pressure, harvest slip on both ends of region

JEROME — Success and hunting pressure generally are down in Magic Valley's several general and permit deer hunting units.

Gary Will, regional wildlife manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said the most noticeable difference thus far has been in the general hunt in Unit 43 (South Fork of the Boise River).

The department ran two checking stations — last week, one north of Gooding and the other on the Mountain Home-Hill City highway.

In the five-day either-sex portion of the season, the Mountain Home station counted 1,727 hunters with 226 deer or a 13 percent success figure. The success percentage was 21 last season.

The Gooding station processed 466 hunters with 91 deer for a 19.5 percent success ratio. Last year the station registered more than 26 percent.

Will said manipulation of the either-sex and bucks-only seasons had brought down the success percentage as the department had wanted.

"Previously we had the either-sex portion at the beginning of the season. This year it was in the middle of the second week, following five days of buck-only. We did that because we wanted to reduce the harvest of antlerless deer," he explained.

But, he said, weather on Sunday might also have contributed to the drop in success.

"Saturday was great but Sunday it cooled and heavy rains came early which forced a lot of hunters out of the hills. From our checking station data it appears that most of the hunters were out of the unit by noon Sunday and that would mean a considerable drop in the number of hunting hours spent and the number of deer taken," Will said.

While the department has funding to run stations on the southside only on alternate years, it maintains a large field force in the areas from Three Creek through Sublett.

"Our impression is that hunting on the south rim has been very light so far," he said. "We are not sure of the reasons, but the hunters were faced with a lot of choices: general deer and elk hunts, pheasant opener, goose opener. They had a lot to choose from. That's probably one of the factors but it doesn't explain it all."

On the matter of the winter predation hunts slated for the Snowville winter-fed herd in late November and December, Will said "the number of applications received here hasn't been very large. I think interest will pick up. We got a pretty good jag of them in the mail yesteraday. But a lot of the hunters are waiting now to see how they do in the general or permit hunts. If they don't fill in those hunts, they'll probably put in for one of these late ones."

Persons interested in those hunts must apply on a standard three-inch by five-inch post card, including name, address, telephone number (home and business), hunting license number and the signature of the applicant, including the names if it is a group application.

Those postcards must be mailed to the Jerome regional office at 868 Main Street, Box 428, Jerome, 83338, prior to 5 p.m. on Nov. 7.

The Idaho Fish and Game Commission authorized as many as nine consecutive five-day hunts to allow a harvest of about 700 antlerless deer in unit 56, east of Interstate 84 where the highway enters Utah.

Mule deer in that part of the unit have been blocked from migration to traditional winter ranges since the interstate was completed and fences were built along the right-of-way. The game animals now winter in Idaho or Utah along the fence and they have been fed artificial rations by the department during most of the past 10 winters.

"To decrease the number of animals to be fed and to reduce the potential for depredation problems in Utah croplands, the number of deer on artificial feed should be reduced from 1,400 to 700," the commission said in authorizing the hunts.

Will said the applications will be filled by drawing if the hunts are over-subscribed. The drawing will be made Nov. 9 at the Jerome office. Some of the later hunts may be cancelled to prevent overharvest and weather could also be a factor in determining the number of hunts.

Permits available for each hunt after the first one will be based on hunt success. No hunt will have more than 300 permits.

One look at half-eaten, still living calves will stifle love of coyotes

Mike Harrop Outdoors

Checking the lot where our cows deliver their calves is usually a pleasant spring morning job.

As the sun rises over nearby hills, I go through the herd, making sure the newborns are being cared for by mama, tagging the newest babies and turning out mothers with older calves.

But one morning last spring the job turned sour.

A newborn baby had somehow gotten through the fence where its mother couldn't protect it.

Sometime during the night, it had fallen victim to coyotes, who ate it alive.

Death seldom comes quickly for babies who fall to the fangs of beasts. Coyotes and other predators often rip into the stomach or begin devouring a hind quarter. In either case, it may take as much as a day for the small one to die.

In the meantime, its tormentors continue to return whenever their bellies grow empty and the unspeakable torment begins again. In all, we lost four newborn calves to coyotes last spring, including one that was waiting for death at dawn when I found her — one leg reduced to bare bones.

There are no words in the English language strong enough to describe the feelings of an animal being slowly devoured alive by predators it is powerless to resist.

But to feel what that tiny calf felt, you might put yourself in the place of camper, eaten alive by grizzlies in Glacier National Park during recent years.

I like coyote music as much as the next guy and I've spent pleasant hours watching a song dog bitch teach her pups to catch mice by prancing on her hind legs to disturbe the rodents, then pouncing on movement in the grass.

But finding those tiny, tormented bodies brings out the blood lust in me.

You see, those calves should have been running and bucking with the other newborns in the herd — they should have been offering an inquisitive nose to my hand.

Anyway, to make a long story short, I declared war on coyotes and failed to win a single battle.

The killing stopped after I began patrolling the calving ground at night with a high-intensity spotlight and shotgun. But I failed to catch and kill a single coyote in the act.

The pack preying on our calves had been called to guns repeatedly until calls no longer worked. Those who had escaped hunters by spring were better at surviving than I am at hunting.

Therefore, I failed to see the concern with which many segments of the outdoor public greeted news that the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service was using a .22 caliber machine gun in airborne coyote control work near Gooding.

After looking into the eyes of that shocked calf with the flesh ripped from her bones, I'd cheer if the USFWS used nuclear cannons to zap coyotes near livestock kills.

The public seems to feel that it is unfair to pursue coyotes from airplanes with machine guns and they're probably right.

But the agency has found that killing coyotes near predation sites can actually reduce stockmen's losses, according to Joe Packham of Boise, the USFWS supervisor for Idaho and parts of Nevada.

In the last fiscal year, $842,000 was spent by the service to kill 3,065 coyotes on about $274.71 per coyote, Packham said in a telephone interview.

But the program's real worth is in the dollar value of the livestock saved. According to author Laurence Pringle's book The Controversial Coyote, researchers found that uncontrolled coyote predation can account for as much as 15.6 percent of the lamb crop in Utah ranches.

Now when a sheepman is struggling for survival, losses that high cannot be tolerated if the operation is to survive.

Cattle ranches are a different story. Only occasionally will coyotes take calves, and cattlemen are divided on the issue. Certainly, if coyotes took only four calves out of 350 from the Harrop Ranch, we'd be better off if the government just gave us the value of the calves and spent no money killing coyotes.

The taxpayer would be better off, too, although the livestock industry paid $296,000 of the USFWS operating expenses last year.

On the other side of the coin, coyotes do not all kill stock. Most are content to exist on carrion, mice and grasshoppers with occasional game animals thrownin.

And besides, the coyote is a biological marvel. In control efforts since 1630, when bounties were first offered for wolves, the United States has all but exterminated wolves and the kit fox. But coyotes have increased their range to nearly every state from the plains and mountain grasslands we call home.

Probably, the coyote's success is due to the demise of the wolves, which considered coyotes to be complete, tasty morsels.

In addition, mama coyote steps up her puppy production when the population falls due to government control efforts and sport hunting.

The result is a coyote population which remains at the carrying capacity of the habitat despite the best efforts of man.

Coyote pelts are becoming prime now, particularly at high altitutdes. No one should feel guilty for shooting a coyote whether you're interested in his hide or revenge.

Later columns this winter will deal with the "how to" of coyote hunting with guns, traps and dogs.

Mike Harrop is a prize-winning outdoor writer and canoeist who operates a ranch in the Bliss area.

Maine vote may end moose hunts

AUGUSTA, Maine (UPI) — The first item on the Nov. 8 Maine election ballot is a question asking voters if they want to halt the state's annual moose hunt.

The proposal was placed on the ballot through efforts of Save Maine's Only Official State Animal, better known as SMOOSA, a group of people who believe moose aren't fair game.

"There's no sport in killing a moose," said John Cole, founder of SMOOSA. "This is a big dumb animal and it's embarrassing to kill it."

Cole and his supporters collected the more than 40,000 signatures required to force a statewide vote on the issue. SMOOSA plans to spend $20,000 on its campaign, mostly for mass media advertising.

The major opponent of the referendum is Sportsmen's Alliance of Maine, which plans to spend $200,000 to convince people to continue the hunt. SAM has been running TV ads in which state game wardens say moose aren't easy prey and provide food for rural families.

A close vote is expected. The moose hunt was outlawed in Maine in 1935 when the moose population became dangerously low.

The population regenerated and there was an experimental moose hunt in 1980. The Legislature then passed a law allowing an annual moose hunt, which began in 1982 and was held again in September of this year.

The state uses a lottery system to decide who will get hunting permits. Permits go to 200 residents and 100 non-residents.

Fish prospects brightening on all Lake Powell species

PHOENIX, Ariz. — Cliches considered, there's no better way to put it — fishing Lake Powell this fall is a whole new ballgame.

You can largely forget the mid-canyon, mid-channel striper boils of recent years, says Wayne Gustaveson of the Utah Department of Wildlife Resources. Stripers now, in early morning and late afternoon hours, are busy herding shad in backs of canyons, against walls and especially in shallow water.

In other hours, jig or troll for the silver-sided fighters in 40-60 feet of water or jig to that depth with anchoves or waterdogs.

And good news for mid- and uplake fishermen: stripers are much more dispersed this year.

Gustaveson's report card on overall Powell fishing is bright. His remarks include:

- Trendfin shad are back, great news for stripers, largemouth, walleye and fishermen;
- Not as many 6- to 10-pound stripers are being caught as in past years but all sizes of stripers look in much better condition with added body fat.
- The largemouth bass future looks better than it has for nine years. They are foraging for shad early and late in with the stripers and the same type lures can be used for each species.
- Crappie fishing is not as good as past falls and the past spring was slow but a good spawn and added nutrients during recent high water should bring them back next year.
- Striper action should peak during the first two weeks of November when water surface temperatures reach 60-64 degrees but could continue brisk into early December.
- While the Glen Canyon Dam area is not producing the non-stop catches of before, up-lake areas are benefiting. When the shad population was suffering last year, stripers went looking for food.
- Unexpectedly good walleye fishing is surfacing in some areas this fall, especially Good Hope Bay, and should once again be excellent next April to July.

Striper limits in 1984 will probably increase to six in possession. The record striped bass, caught in July, weighed 31 pounds, 7 ounces. Fishing for all 12 Lake Powell game species on the 186-mile long Lake Powell is open 24 hours a day, 365 days a year.

Stripers are the trophy fish in Lake Powell

Idaho must remain vigilant to protect F&G funding

Let me give you some cud to chew on.

Idaho state law 36-107 states that all money from the sale of licenses shall be deposited in a "special account to be known as the fish and game account, which is hereby established, reserved, set aside, appropriated and made available until expended as may be directed by the commission in carrying out the purposes of the Idaho Fish and Game Code or any law or regulation promulgated for the protection of wildlife and shall be used for no other purpose."

Seems almost each year the Legislature, which determines how this money is spent, has other ideas for these funds. This year, House Bill 114 would have used your license money to alter stream channels. Actually these stream alteration projects should come from the Water Resources Board, which has its own budget.

With the current financial problems in the state, we will see other bills to divert fish and game monies to "bail out" other state programs.

And — the biggest slap in the face to sportsmen — is how this dedicated fund is handled. The interest from this fund is not returned to the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, but rather put in the general fund for pet projects the Legislature may find.

So where you bitch about "what are they doing with my money?" ask your Legislature.

It is this group which determines what is spent and what is placed in dedicated funds and they keep the interest. And, of course, they don't want to spend the money. They want the interest it earns for other things.

When you bitch to me, I'll you you tell your representatives."

American hunters and anglers spent a record $486 million in 1982 on licenses, tags, permits and stamps.

High fishing-license income among the states was California where fishermen paid $24,724,319 for this privilege.

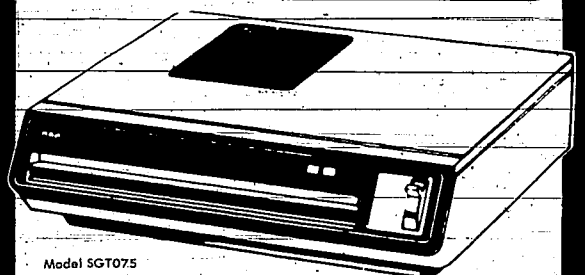

Revenues from the sale of hunting and fishing licenses are used by the state to finance fish and wildlife management programs. The numbers of license holders in each state are used to determine the amount of funds apportioned to the states under the "Federal Aid to Fish and Wildlife Restoration" programs. Under these programs, the states are reimbursed for up to 75 percent of the costs of

Mini-Cassia goose hunting quiets down

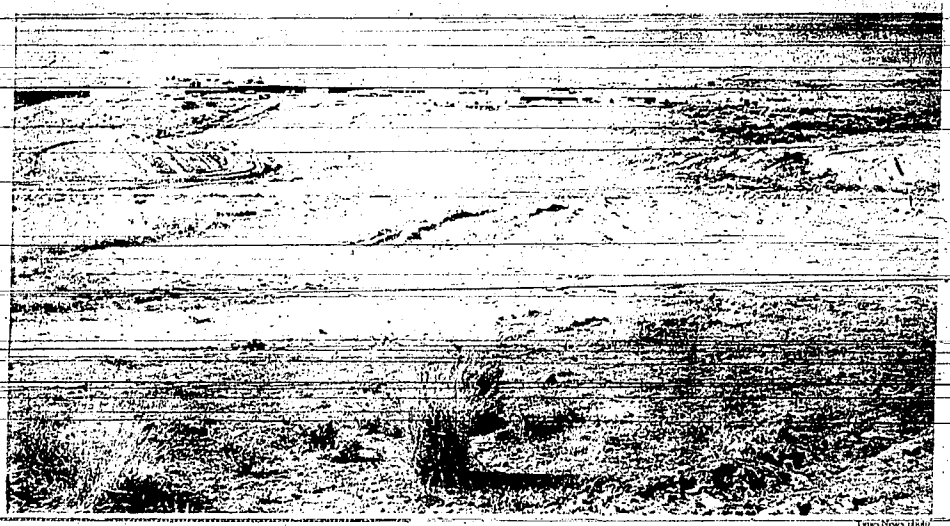

RUPERT — The shooting has quieted down and the geese have moved out to a large degree, ending the banner Canada honker hunting season opener in Mini-Cassia.

Gary Will, regional wildlife manager for the Idaho Department of Fish and Game, said the geese largely had left the Snake River and newly-opened hunting agricultural land after the second day of the season.

"Our field officers tell us the geese pretty much have left the area and the river and it is difficult for us to say where they are. We do know a rather large number moved on to the Skaggs Ranch (which is closed to hunting) but whether the majority went up the river or down the flyway, we can't assess," he said.

One Burley hunter said Monday he was still getting some geese "but they're feeding a long ways from the old closure. I found a bunch of about 300 way out in the Hegler area."

The department is hopeful the geese will return to the river sanctuary as hunter pressure lessens.

announced. Honeycutt provided a hole-by-hole tour of the new layout.

"No. 10 (directly south of the clubhouse parking lot) goes straight south with a left dogleg around the hill." (The lay of the fairway is against the dogleg.)

No. 11 is a short par three that drops in elevation from tee to green and goes directly toward the airport.

No. 12 is a "long par four with a dogleg left around the hill."

No. 13 is "the most picturesque hole on the course with the tee on top of Snob Hill and fairway through a rock cut. If you're lucky enough to get into the cut, you'll be looking at a green 70 feet below. It's a par four.

"The exit of No. 13 is a beer stop; you'll be back at the clubhouse. Fortified from your stop at the clubhouse, No. 14 is an uphill par four with a bunker in the right center of the fairway."

No. 15 is "a long par five bordered on the left by a six-acre lake and on the right by 150,000 acres of BLM (Bureau of Land Management) ground.

"No. 16 is a long par three with a short lake coming into play on the edge."

No. 17 is "a par four dogleft left around the same lake that frustrated you on No. 15."

No. 18 "is a downhill par four but the 18th green is on top of a hill and will require some accuracy."

Honeycutt figures most of the roughing-out work will be completed by next week and the work on the sprinkling system — fully automatic — will begin. He hopes that the weather holds long enough to get some rye grass planted and sprouted this fall which will hold the soil during the winter and double as a mulch next spring.

When the course will open for play remains at the whim of the short and fickle growing season here (it's over a mile above sea level, about 5,300 feet).

Downs said he hopes the weather will be good enough to get the fairway and greens planted in mid-May or a little earlier. Given a good start and continued good growing weather, Downs feels there could be a chance of playing it for the first time sometime in late August.

Obviously, he is thinking it would be nice to have the Cactus Pete's Amateur as the first major event on the back nine even if it might still be a little rough. But if it is too rough, the course will be given an extra eight months with the probable opener shifted back to June of 1984.

Honeycutt also anticipates the course will look considerably older than most in a very short time because "we also have the tree contract with trees from our own farm. We'll be putting in trees with trunks about this size," he said, holding his hands to indicate about an eight-inch diameter.

In 1982, $140 million was apportioned by the federal government for fish and wildlife conservation.

The figures here in Idaho are confusing because of fiscal year and actual year conflicts. You purchase your license on a January-through-December basis while the budget process is figured from July to July.

But as close as I can come, $11,437,257 was paid for licenses and permits for hunting in Idaho during the 1981-1982 period.

These figures are only approximate. They do not include, for example, people who are exempt from fishing licenses. Special provisions are made for senior citizens and people under 16 plus military personnel.

The total of fishing license holders in the U.S. in 1981 was 29,277,241.

Now to get all this in perspective, consider this. On any given day, more people are fishing than bowling, swimming, finger painting, playing softball and tennis, etc. Yet, the money spent on this recreation is very low in comparison to the participants.

Also, more money is spent on fishing equipment and supplies than those aforementioned sports combined.

Fishing in Idaho generates more money for business than any other activity. Still we see county, city and state budgets that will allocate money for many activities, but not one red cent to clean up streams or help gain access to our lakes and streams.

Perhaps the published statement of one Idaho lawmaker would sum up some peoples' attitude about Idaho wildlife.

"The sooner we get rid of the fish and animals in Idaho, the sooner we make it a better state."

If you are among this group, tear this section of the paper up and call me a dirty name. If you love the outdoors of Idaho and love to fish and hunt, support the fish and game department on issues it takes to the Legislature. Take note of those in the Legislature who oppose these proposals and ask them why. You may just run into the lawmaker who wants to rid the state of all wildlife.

The irrigation season has ended and the streams are running clear again. This makes for excellent off-season fishing in these small creeks in Magic Valley.

The Snake River has been giving up some excellent fishing for those who are willing to walk or suffer getting to the areas.
